Edgar A. Guest

THE LIGHT of FAITH
HARBOR LIGHTS of HOME

Christmas 1941

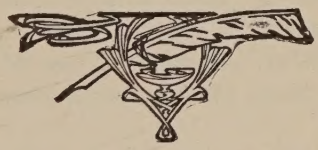
PART ONE

THE LIGHT OF FAITH

The Light of Faith

By

Edgar A. Guest



The Reilly & Lee Co.
Chicago

COPYRIGHT, MCMXXVI
BY
THE REILLY & LEE CO.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

PRINTED IN U. S. A.

The Story of the Title

Mr. Guest's publishers offered a prize of $1,000 for the best title for his Ninth Book of Verse. From nearly half a million suggested titles the three judges unanimously chose the title submitted by the Reverend M. S. Rice. The prize winner was invited to tell the story of how he came to make his choice. Dr. Rice responded as follows:

When it was suggested that the interested public should name the next book of my dear friend Edgar A. Guest, the title, Harbor Lights of Home, came to my mind as by an intuition. I am not accustomed to competitive suggestions, but the aptness of the name seemed to me so clear I could not resist offering it.

I know Mr. Guest; I know his home; I know how beautifully his pen is constantly finding the genuine truths of a genuine home for the guidance of all other homes.

These are difficult days in our social world. Many things are drifting and uncertain. The home is imperiled. It is the primary foundation of all our social relationship. He who strikes at the home will shake the fundamentals of all government. There seem to be many forces which are working that way.

Edgar A. Guest is in my judgment the finest force in America to-day, in defense of the home. With homely, and beautiful, and heart-touching phrases and stories, he is setting clearly before our country the fact of parental love and affection, and making clear the way for our socially troubled day, out of its storm and threatening darkness, into the secure harbor of a real home life.

One night, with my boys, I found myself in our little boat along a strange shore of a great lake, and no harbor was to be had. We were inexperienced sailors, and our chart did not show a course to the nearest safety. I drew a line across the chart from where we were to a lighthouse fifty miles away and, setting my compass on the line, figured as best I could the reading we should sail. For three hours we sailed straight into the darkness. No one can ever describe for me the feeling I had when out of that gloom before us came the flash of the light we sought.

Edgar Guest is setting, in an unfailing gleam before our generation, the genuine guidance of the Harbor Lights of Home. I shall most surely hope this latest volume of his may send its beckoning cheer across an even larger horizon than any of its predecessors, and that it may everywhere be as welcome as was the gleam of that lighthouse that dark night to me.

M. S. Rice.

INDEX

Poem	Page
Adventures	19
Advice	105
Against Odds	107
As We Prayed	126
Autumn	57
Beaten Man Talks, A	85
Beauty	170
Belief	46
Bit of Advice, A	153
Blessings	91
Book, A	87
Brave Hearts, The	93
Brothers All	38
Burdens, The	118
Butterfly Discusses Evolution, The	158
Career	141
Cheat, The	35
Choosing a Friend	135
Consolation	128
Contentment	65
Courage, Courage, Courage!	49
Dark Days	101
Day Is Not So Long, A	89
Dealing With Me	130
Do It	123
Effort, The	103
Envy	75

Poem	Page
Faith	113
Faithless	145
Faith of the Traveling Man, The	177
False Counselors	41
Father's Prayer, A	27
Fellowship	169
Fishing	167
Friendship	43
Future Great, The	131
Gettin' Old	165
Good World, The	73
Grace at Evening	185
Grief	115
Hope	37
Hypocrisy	67
I Believe	63
If They Could Write	95
Imagination	47
Joy of the Future, The	39
Kirby, the Rose Lover	181
Let Me	45
Life	20
Life is a Problem	86
Life's Canvas	55
Light of Faith, The	15
Lines for a Friend's House	144
Little Deeds, The	92
Little Things	51
Lord, Make a Regular Man Out of Me	143
Love and a Friend	81

Poem	Page
Manhood	61
Men I Know, The	59
Mothers of the Ministers, The	151
Need, The	149
Neighborly	99
New Year's Plea, A	79
Non-Believer, The	80
Oak Tree Talks, The	21
Old Man Green	29
On a Certain Religious Argument	114
Our Own World	108
Out in the World	32
Package of Seeds, The	179
Painter, The	172
Philosophy	137
Plea, A	23
Plea for Faith, A	120
Plea for Growth, A	68
Prayer, A	69
Prayer for the Home	60
Prayer for the New Year	139
Preference, A	125
References	111
Road to Glory, The	33
Salesman Courageous, The	121
Science and Faith	83
Self	36
Selfishness	52
Sense of Humor, A	26
Sermons We See	163

Poem — Page

Song of Enough, The....161
Spirit, The.... 74
Stone-Throwers....110
Summer Day, A....183
Sunrise.... 77

Test of Philosophy....104
Test, The.... 53
Thanksgiving....117
They're Waiting Over There.... 24
Things He Didn't Do, The....154
Things I Must Not Do, The.... 97
Things Work Out.... 66
Thought for the Day.... 16
To a Friend.... 88
Training....147
True Worth.... 58
Tulips....174

Uninstructed.... 71
Unseen Guests, The.... 31

Violets, The....156

What Counts....159
Why Fathers Boast....175
Wish, A.... 98

You....133
Young World, The.... 17

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

Shakespeare

The Light of Faith

When the dark days come and the clouds grow gray
All men must brave them as best they may,
With never too much repining;
And bravest is he, when the shadows fall,
Who sees in the gloom of his darkened hall
The light of his faith still shining.

In those lonely days when his heart shall ache
And it seems that soon shall his courage break,
There is only one place to borrow;
One place to go for the strength he needs,
He must bind with faith every wound that bleeds,
And cling to his faith through sorrow.

For truly forlorn is the man who weeps
When his dead lies buried in floral heaps
And friends his path are lining;
And a pitiful creature he's doomed to be
If he cannot look through the gloom and see
The light of his faith still shining.

Thought for the Day

This day is mine to mar or make,
God keep me strong and true;
Let me no erring by-path take,
No doubtful action do.

Grant me, when with the setting sun
This fleeting day shall end,
I may rejoice o'er something done,
Be richer by a friend.

Let all I meet along the way
Speak well of me to-night,
I would not have the humblest say
I'd hurt him by a slight.

Let me be patient and serene,
Gentle and kind and fair,
Help me to keep my record clean
Through all that I must bear.

Grant that because I live to-day,
And to my thoughts give voice,
O'er something he shall hear me say
Another shall rejoice.

Let there be something true and fine
When night slips down, to tell
That I have lived this day of mine
Not selfishly, but well.

The Young World

The sky's a sea of blue to-day,
Where white-sailed vessels drift away;
The city walls beneath remain
The prisons gray of care and pain;
But just beyond, the orchard trees
Are throwing perfume on the breeze,
And where stood winter yesterday,
The loveliest blossoms nod and sway.

A city wall ne'er comes to bloom,
But passes to an ugly doom;
While trees and hills and stream and field
With every changing season yield
Their touch of loveliness to life.
The song birds come with flute and fife,
And all things tell in Nature's tongue
That this old world is always young.

Young birds nest in the oldest trees,
And with their music flood the breeze.
Old brooks unto the ocean flow
The way they did long years ago.
They glisten in the morning sun
And past the great stones leap and run—

Old as the hills they wind among,
Old as the hills, yet ever young.

Cities are victims of decay—
No springtime comes to steel and clay;
But just beyond, where Nature reigns
And ancient loveliness remains,
The blossoms to the trees return,
The woods grow green with moss and fern,
The lanes with daffodils are strung,
Old as the hills, yet ever young.

Adventurers

He risked for much, and risking, knew
What failure meant.
His all into the game he threw,
And as it went,
He stood prepared to pay the cost
And not to whimper when he lost.

He knew defeat would sweep away
His ventured gold,
Knew he must face the winter day
And brave the cold . . . . . .
Failing, he said: "The thing is done.
'Twould have been splendid, had I won."

Would you be safe, then never dare
For greater things—
Quit not the beaten thoroughfare,
Nor try your wings;
But when the path of chance you choose,
Still play the man, although you lose.

This is the pledge men make with Fate:
"Here is our all!
Either we'll stand among the great,
Or broken, fall.
Splendid the goal we hope to gain;
But failing, we shall not complain."

Life

A little laughter, and a time for tears,
A stretch of duty, and an hour for play—
'Tis thus we march life's journey through the years
From baby curls to tresses thin and gray.

A friend or two whose faith in us remains;
A roof where love has sheltered every dream,
Has counted all its losses and its gains—
These make the fabric of life's noble scheme.

I saw a game played with a crowd of boys;
Men gave them wire and string and nails and tin
And said: "A prize to him who best employs These useless things and brings his product in."

Then from those trivial bits grew ships a-sail—
One lad the model of a castle made.
And there I saw us all, who win, who fail,
Although 'twas but a game the youngsters played.

Life gives us bits of joys and bits of cares,
And bids us fashion something as a whole.
We choose our own design, and if it bears
The stamp of merit—God rewards the soul.

The Oak Tree Talks

This said the whispering oak:
"I've marveled, too,
Young dreamer, just as you,
In days before you were I held my place
And wondered at God's grace;
And I have seen His power
In raging tempest and a summer shower.
Now I am wiser far
Than all the wisest of your people are.
To suit God's mighty purposes and plans,
Mine is a longer life than man's.
I was before you were, and it may be Children of many ages I shall see.

"Dreamer, that sun which sets the sky aflame
Was here before you came
To cope with sin and shame;
Those stars at night
Have shed their lovely light
Upon this weary world where mortals doubt,
And all man's science cannot put one out.
Long have I ceased to fear,
For I have felt God near;
Though you were made a man and I a tree,
More wonders I have seen than you shall see.

"God's voice is in the breeze which stirs my leaves,
And in the song
Of birds I've nested long.
At autumn I have felt and know His thrill
In every tawny acorn which I spill.
Oh, brave your pain,
For you shall live again.
I know it by the marvels I have seen:
There is a richer life than this has been.
I know it, and the song birds know it, too,
The stars have knowledge God denies to you.
Strange, is it not, that in His wondrous plan
A tree should have to prove God's love to man?"

A Plea

Grant me to close the day without regret;
  Let me not into careless conduct fall,
Gaining my little purposes, and yet
  Wishing some hasty words I could recall.

Increase my stock of patience, Lord, I pray!
  Let me not whimper loudly at my care;
Let me take pride at evening in the way
  I met the trials which were mine to bear.

Teach me to play the man in little things,
  To suffer disappointments when I must,
To brave the irritation failure brings
  And still be kind and generous and just.

Let me not stain my victories with hate;
  When night comes on let me look back and see
In all that I've accomplished, small or great,
  Nothing which brings regret or shame to me.

They're Waiting Over There

They're waiting for us over there,
The young, the beautiful and fair
Who left us, oh, so long ago,
Lonely and hurt on earth below,
Are waiting bravely, never fear,
Until our faces shall appear.

Then when our journey here is done
And we set out to follow on
And pass the heavy mantled door
Which leads to rest forevermore,
They will be there to laugh away
The loneliness we feel to-day.

They'll welcome us with wondrous grace
And show us all about the place,
They'll take us gently by the hand
And guide us through that radiant land,
They'll tell us all they've learned and seen
Through the long absence that has been.

We'll meet the friends who have been kind
To them the while we stayed behind,
Angels who long have dwelt above
And welcomed them with arms of love,

Who sheltered them the long years through,
Just as we'd prayed for them to do.

Though now you mourn, who stay behind,
How sad 'twould be to leave, and find
Upon that distant other shore
No loved one who had gone before—
The gates of Heaven to enter through
With not one there to welcome you.

As now when some long journey ends
And we're received by smiling friends
Who've watched and waited for our train,
So shall they welcome us again;
The young, the beautiful and fair
Will all be waiting for us there.

A Sense of Humor

"What shall I give him now?" said God.
"He has the strength with which to plod
The ways of life, the love of right,
The gift of song when the skies are bright.

"Wisdom is planted in his mind,
This man shall be both true and kind,
Earth's beauty shall delight his eyes
And to its glories he shall rise.

"He shall know right from wrong, and he
Defender of the faith shall be;
What more on him can I bestow
Before to earth I let him go?"

Then spake an angel standing near:
"Wisdom is not enough, I fear,
Master, for all that he must do—
Grant him a sense of humor, too.

"Grant him to smile at petty wrong,
The changing moods which sway the throng;
When cares annoy him, show him then
How laughable are angry men!"

Years after, when his strength was tasked,
"What keeps you patient?" he was asked,
"What keeps you brave who are so tried?"
"My sense of humor," he replied.

A Father's Prayer

Lord, make me tolerant and wise;
  Incline my ears to hear him through;
Let him not stand with downcast eyes,
  Fearing to trust me and be true.
Instruct me so that I may know
The way my son and I should go.

When he shall err, as once did I,
  Or boyhood folly bids him stray,
Let me not into anger fly
  And drive the good in him away.
Teach me to win his trust, that he Shall keep no secret hid from me.

Lord, strengthen me that I may be
  A fit example for my son.
Grant he may never hear or see
  A shameful deed that I have done.
However sorely I am tried,
Let me not undermine his pride.

In spite of years and temples gray,
  Still let my spirit beat with joy;

Teach me to share in all his play
  And be a comrade with my boy.
Wherever we may chance to be,
Let him find happiness with me.

Lord, as his father, now I pray
  For manhood's strength and counsel wise;
Let me deal justly, day by day,
  In all that fatherhood implies.
To be his father, keep me fit;
Let me not play the hypocrite!

Old Man Green

Old Man Green, you've never heard of,
Papers never used a word of
Him or anything he did;
Seems as though his light was hid
Day by day from mortal eyes,
Wasn't clever, great or wise;
Just a carpenter who made
Odds and ends and liked his trade.

Old Man Green lived over there
In that humble cottage, where
Five plump babies came to bless
Those small rooms with happiness;
And as time went on they grew
Just as rich men's children do;
Three smart boys and two fine girls
With the prettiest of curls.

Old Man Green from day to day
Put up shelves to earn his pay,
Took the little that he made
Following faithfully his trade,
And somehow his wife and he Managed it most carefully,
And five children, neat and clean,
Answered to the name of Green.

Old Man Green with saw and plane
Little from the world could gain,
But with that small sum he earned
Many things his children learned.
"Those Green boys," the teachers said,
"Have the stuff to get ahead.
Finest girls we've ever seen—
Little Kate and Mary Green."

This is all there is to tell,
Boys and girls are doing well;
Each with courage and with grace
Fills in life an honored place.
Old Man Green is dead and gone,
But his worth is shining on,
This his praise, if praise be needed,
As a father he succeeded.

The Unseen Guests

It's the friends who come to call,
Who make bright the room and hall.

What see you in yonder chair
But the friends who've rested there?

Do they not still linger near
Who have once brought laughter here?

When a friend has left your door,
Would you say he'll come no more?

Once admitted, can you say
That he'll ever go away?

He shall come when you rejoice,
He shall answer to your voice.

Through the long years, smiling there,
He shall keep his favorite chair.

And as days shall come and go
Many a friend these rooms shall know.

They shall live and still be known,
Gracing everything you own.

For the memories we hold
Are what some call growing old.

I would not shirk the task nor scorn the fight,
  Nor ask a life untouched by doubt or care;
Lord, give me strength to battle for the right,
  And courage for the burdens I must bear.
I seek not always shelter from the rain—
A timid child at life's small window pane.

The wind blew yesterday. A cruel storm
  Snarled at the toilers of the busy world,
And at my little window, snug and warm,
  I watched the angry snowdrifts as they swirled.
Thought I: "The weaklings at their firesides stay,
Only the brave men venture out to-day!"

Grant me the open world where tempests blow,
  A man's place in the ranks of men I'd fill.
Grant me to brave my share of doubt and woe,
  To dull complaining let my voice be still;
Let me be out there, fighting might and main,
Not an on-looker at some window pane.

The Road to Glory

You'll never get to glory, lad, along the glittering road,
Your shoulders must be big and strong to bear the heavy load;
And you must put the pleasures by,
The painted cheek and smiling eye,
The merry dance and rousing song, to do what duty asks.
The road to glory's straight, and far Away from where the revels are,
With many a dusty mile to tread and countless dreary tasks.

Two ways there are for youth to go, and one is gay with song;
The other calls for earnest men and rugged hearts and strong.
Bewitching sirens lure the feet
Of those who sigh for pleasures sweet,
But when the purse is empty, boy, in scorn they pass you by;
'Tis time enough to dance and sing
When you have done some useful thing,
And youth must strike for goals afar which old men dare not try.

You'll never get to glory, lad, by traveling pleasure's way;
Who steps aside for dance and game shall see his strength decay.
So bend your shoulders to the load
And trudge the rough and dusty road,
Content to reap at harvest time the fruits of what you do;
And choose the brave and earnest souls
Whose eyes have turned to distant goals,
And they shall make you strong and wise and peace shall dwell with you.

The Cheat

I cheated a good friend yesterday,
Kept what was his, and went my way,
Wronged him by silence—for in haste
I let a glad thought go to waste.

I had a word of cheer to speak,
To strengthen him when he grew weak,
To send him smiling on his way—
But what I thought I didn't say.

He would have richer been to know
That deed of his had pleased me so,
But oh, I failed to let him see
How much his conquest meant to me.

I cheated him of words of praise
Which would have cheered his troubled days;
In this a faithful friend I wronged,
By keeping what to him belonged.

The praise was his by right to hear,
To him belonged my word of cheer;
In silence, though, from him I turned
And cheated him of what he'd earned.

Self

This much I know: ill-gotten gain
Is laden with unceasing pain.

However covered his deceit,
The trickster knows himself a cheat.

Strangers, mistaking false for true,
Still leave him wondering "if they knew."

Men will some trivial wrong forget,
But he who caused it, feels it yet.

Others mistaking sham for real,
Know not what conscience can reveal.

However cleverly you weave,
Self is the one you can't deceive.

Better it is to lose the prize
Than win by methods you despise.

Beware the plaudits of the crowd,
Of what you do let self be proud.

No greater torture can be named
Than of yourself to be ashamed.

Hope

There's hope in a place, however dark,
  There's hope in a prison cell.
'Twas hope that lightened up Noah's Ark
  When the raging waters fell.
And there's never a breast so bleak and bare
But the spark of hope is glistening there.

There is hope whatever the place may be,
  There is hope in the darkened room,
Hope on the storm-tossed, angry sea
  And hope at a loved one's tomb.
And there's never a heart so sorely torn
But can cherish the hope of a brighter morn.

Hope can shine through a gray stone wall
  And barriers strong and stout,
And hope can answer the faintest call
  And no power can shut it out.
Though a man be shackled and locked away,
Hope sings to him of a better day.

For hope will follow the will to be,
  And go with the will to do,
And there's none so low in this world but he
  May fashion his life anew.
For hope shall shine through the darkened day
Till the last brave man shall have passed away.

Brothers All

We're brothers all, whate'er the place,
Brothers whether in rags or lace,
Brothers all, by the good Lord's grace.

Some may sit in a royal hall,
Some may dwell where the rooms are small,
But under the skin we are brothers all.

Some may toil 'neath the burning sun,
Some may dream where the waters run,
But we're brothers all when the day is done.

By the sun that shines and the rains that fall,
By the shadows flung on the garden wall,
By the good Lord's grace, we are brothers all.

By the hurt that comes and the falling tear,
By the common grief at the silent bier,
And the grave that awaits, we are brothers here.

The Joy of the Future

Trouble is laughter as soon as it's done,
Danger is joy when the battle is won,
The night is forgotten when morning's begun,
So don't stay too long at your wailing.
The rough road is dreary to travel but you
Will look back and smile when your journey is through,
You may doubt this to-day, but you'll find it is true,
So don't fret too much when you're failing.

The care which now burdens you down will grow light,
Your doubts and your fears will soon slip out of sight,
And you'll laugh at them all when you've put them to flight,
So don't be too gloomy about them;
For the pride of to-morrow is fashioned to-day,
Men boast of the burdens they've borne on the way,
And the fears which this morning fill you with dismay
You will laugh at the moment you rout them.

There's none of us free from the whiplash of care,
The gladdest of hearts has been stung by despair,
But all come to beauty some time and somewhere,
So don't dwell too long in your sorrow;
Be brave and be strong as you stand to the test,
By the burdens you've borne you will see you were blest,
All the hardships endured will seem sweet, as you rest
And you come to that brighter to-morrow.

They taught him how to come to skill,
They talked of courage and of will,
They gave him mottoes day by day
To spur him on his upward way.
"Success is all that counts," they said,
"Dig in my boy and get ahead!"

Believing all they had to say,
The boy dug in from day to day;
To reach the goal he would attain
He labored on with might and main.
"Success is all that counts!" they cried.
So never once he turned aside.

By fighting here and scheming there,
With now and then a blow unfair
Dealt thoughtlessly for victory's sake
He reached the goal he'd hoped to make.
In terms of money and its fame
Success at last was his to claim.

But in the shadow of his goal
He found himself a lonely soul;
He wished to hear his praises voiced,

But in his conquest few rejoiced.
Men whispered with a bitter smile
How cruelly "he'd made his pile."

They had forgot, who trained his mind,
To teach him that he must be kind;
That friendship is a dearer thing
Than all that victory can bring.
"Success is all that counts?" he cried.
"The men who gave that counsel, lied!"

Friendship

You do not need a score of men to laugh and sing with you;
You can be rich in comradeship with just a friend
or two.
You do not need a monarch's smile to light your way along;
Through weal or woe a friend or two will fill your days with song.

So let the many go their way, and let the throng pass by;
The crowd is but a fickle thing which hears not when you sigh.
The multitude is quick to run in search of favorites new,
And all that man can hold for grief is just a friend
or two.

When winds of failure start to blow, you'll find the throng has gone—
The splendor of a brighter flame will always lure them on;
But with the ashes of your dreams, and all you hoped to do,
You'll find that all you really need is just a friend
or two.

You cannot know the multitude, however hard you try:
It cannot sit about your hearth; it cannot hear you sigh;

It cannot read the heart of you, or know the hurts
you bear;
Its cheers are all for happy men and not for those in care.

So let the throng go on its way and let the crowd depart;
But one or two will keep the faith when you are sick at heart;
And rich you'll be, and comforted, when gray skies
hide the blue,
If you can turn and share your grief with just a friend or two.

Let Me

Let me go through the day
  With kindly thought for all;
To live, to work, to play,
  And with the night recall
The journey and its care
And find no hatred there.

Let me come home at night
  Clear-eyed and unashamed,
Still clinging to the right,
  My record undefamed;
Let not my conscience see
The marks of shame on me.

Let me not, mad for gain,
  Or pomp or place or pride,
Cause others needless pain
  Or thrust the weak aside;
Let no one say I've been Cruel or base or mean.

Whatever may befall
  My lot throughout the day,
Let me come through it all
  Fair as I start away;
Let me, when night brings rest,
Know that I've done my best.

Belief

Since laughter comes and laughter goes
  And all the winds of summer pass,
When underneath the drifted snows
There sleep the violet and the rose,
  The scarlet poppy and the grass;
Doubt you, beside your window pane,
That summer time will come again?

So cold the wind, so bleak the sky,
  So cruel is the sting of frost
That everything which charmed the eye
But yesterday as you walked by,
  From life now seems forever lost;
Yet do you doubt on such a day
That there will be another May?

When out of life the laughter goes,
  And sorrow's winds blow bleak and cold,
And steal from lovely cheeks the rose,
And with death's seal fair eyelids close,
  Then to your faith can you not hold?
Have you not courage and belief
To brave your winter time of grief?

The barren fields shall green again,
  In silent trees the birds shall nest;
Then shall life desolate remain,
Bleak with eternal gloom and pain?
  Are roses more than mortals blest?
Not so! For us who feel death's sting
God keeps a lovelier, ampler spring!

Imagination

The dreamer sees the finished thing before the start is made;
He sees the roses pink and red beyond the rusty spade,
And all that bleak and barren spot which is so bare to see
Is but a place where very soon the marigolds will be.

Imagination carries him across the dusty years,
And what is dull and commonplace in radiant charm appears.
The little home that he will build where willows bend and bow
Is but the dreamer's paper sketch, but he can see it now.

He sees the little winding walk that slowly finds his door,
The chimney in its ivy dress, the children on the floor,
The staircase where they'll race and romp, the windows where will gleam
The light of peace and happiness—the house that's still a dream.

You see but weeds and rubbish there, and ugliness and grime,
But he can show you where there'll be a swing in summer time.

And he can show you where there'll be a fireplace rich with cheer,
Although you stand and shake your head and think the dreamer queer.

Imagination! This it is the dreamer has to-day;
He sees the beauty that shall be when time has cleared the way.
He reads the blueprint of his years, and he can plainly see
Beyond life's care and ugliness—the joy that is to be.

Courage, Courage, Courage!

When the burden grows heavy, and rough is the way,
When you falter and slip, and it isn't your day,
And your best doesn't measure to what is required,
When you know in your heart that you're fast growing tired,
With the odds all against you, there's one thing to do;
Call on your courage and see the thing through.

Who battles for victory ventures defeat.
Misfortune is something we all have to meet;
Take the loss with the grace you would take in the gain,
When things go against you, don't whine or complain;
Just call on your courage and grin if you can,
Though you fail to succeed, do not fail as a man.

There are dark days and stormy, which come to us all,
When about us in ruin our hopes seem to fall.
But stand to whatever you happen to meet—

We must all drink the bitter as well as the sweet.
And the test of your courage is: What do you do
In the hour when reverses are coming to you?

Never changed is the battle by curse or regret,
Though you whimper and whine, still the end must be met.
And who fights a good fight, though he struggle in vain,
Shall have many a vict'ry to pay for his pain.
So take your reverses as part of the plan
Which God has devised for creating a man.

Little Things

Lord, make me strong enough to bear
My little round of anxious care.
The day returns. For this I pray:
Sufficient wisdom for the day.
Although I may not walk with kings,
Let me be big in little things.

Grace me with modesty and teach
Me kindliness of thought and speech;
Let me not hasty be to chide
The children walking at my side,
And spoil with imperfections slight
The record which the day shall write.

Lord, make me big enough I pray
To triumph in a lesser way.
When petty disappointments rise,
Let me be patient, gentle, wise.
Missing the joy which greatness brings
Let me not fail in little things.

Lord, I would work and neighbor here,
Too big to hate, too wise to sneer.
I would be helpful, cheerful, kind,
Gentle of speech and broad of mind.
And though not far my circle swings,
Let me be great in little things.

Selfishness

Think of yourself from first to last:
Guard yourself from the wintry blast;
Feed your stomach and quench your thirst;
Feather your nest and feather it first;
Fly to your pleasures and dance them through—
There is nobody else in this world but you.

Think of yourself—and right or wrong,
Give no thought to the passing throng.
What if your conduct should bring to shame
Those who honor and share your name?
What if they're hurt by the things you do?
Why should their suffering trouble you?

Live for yourself, but don't complain
When you have come to the world's disdain.
Don't return when the night comes on
And wonder where all your friends have gone.
Carry no burden except your own,
But always be ready to weep alone.

But if you wish for the happy years
And the love of a friend who sees your tears,
And the world's respect and an honored name,
And all the joys which the gentle claim,
You must think of others in all you do—
You must think of them first, and last of you.

The Test

God won't ask if you were clever,
For I think He'll little care
When your toil is done forever;
He may question: "Were you square?
Did you do the best you could do
With the knowledge you possessed?
Did you do the things you should do?"
That will be your earthly test.

God won't ask what sort of labor
Life commissioned you to do.
Were you richer than your neighbor?
Of the many or the few?
But you knew what right and wrong were,
What was bad and what was good,
And you knew what weak and strong were;
Did you do the best you could?

Were you skillful, were you daring,
Were you brilliant? What of those?
All the medals you are wearing,
Once in death your eyelids close,
Will remain on earth behind you;
All you'll ever take away
Is the soul which God assigned you
For its tenement of clay.

There the great may be the humble
And the poor may be the rich;
And the weak and frail who stumble,
And the digger in the ditch,
May receive eternal glory
For the good they tried to do;
God shall smile to hear your story
If you lived to what you knew.

Life's Canvas

Sunshine and shadow and laughter and tears,
These are forever the paints of the years,
Splashed on the canvas of life day by day,
We are the artists, the colors are they.
We are the painters, the pigments we use
Never we're wholly permitted to choose.
Grief with its gray tint and joy with its red
Come from life's tubes to be blended and spread.

Here at the easel, the brushes at hand,
Each for a time is permitted to stand.
White was the canvas when first we began,
Ready to picture the life of a man.
Now we are splashing the pigments about,
Knowing the reds and the blues must give out,
Soon we must turn to the dull hues and gray,
Painting the sorrows that darken the way.

Now with the sunshine and now with the shade
Slowly but surely the picture is made.
Even the gray tints with beauty may glow
Recalling the joy of the lost long ago.
Let me not daub it with doubt and despair,
Deeds that are hasty, unkind and unfair,
But when the last bit of pigment is dried
Let me look back at my canvas with pride.

Let me, when trouble is mine to portray,
Dip, with good courage, my brush in the gray;
After the tears and the grief let there be Something of faith for my children to see.
Lord, let me paint not in anger or hate,
Grant me the patience to work and to wait,
Make me an artist, though humble my style,
And let my life's canvas show something worth while.

Autumn

I want to come to autumn with the silver in my hair,
And maybe have the children stop to look at me and stare;
I'd like to reach October free from blemish or from taint,
As splendid as a maple tree which artists love to paint.

I'd like to come to autumn, with my life work fully done
And look a little like a tree that's gleaming in the sun;
I'd like to think that I at last could come through care and tears
And be as fair to look upon as every elm appears.

But when I reach October, full contented I shall be
If those with whom I've walked through life shall still have faith in me;
Nor shall I dread the winter's frost, when brain and body tire,
If I have made my life a thing which others can admire.

True Worth

That man is great, whatever be his labor,
Who wins the admiration of his neighbor.

Who, spite of purse or dress or pomp's dominion,
Meets all mankind and wins its good opinion.

That man is victor in life's last December
If but a few his kindliness remember.

True worth is not by genius fashioned solely,
Great souls are oftenest found among the lowly.

Brilliance of mind and skill of hand may grumble
And lack the glorious courage of the humble.

Fortune by chance upon the shrewd may visit,
But gentleness proclaims the soul exquisite.

Chance may uncover genius, striking blindly,
But 'tis an inward glory to be kindly.

That man is great, whatever be his station,
Who truly serves his God, his home, his nation.

The Men I Know

This I'll say for the men I know:
  Most of them work for their daily bread,
  Most of them follow the path I tread,
Whether in places high or low
  Most of them cherish the flag o'erhead;
Most of them, eager for wealth or fame,
Seem to be proud of their family name.

Some of them strong and some of them weak,
  Some of them bitter at times in woe,
  But this I'll say for the men I know:
Rare indeed is the mental freak
  Who would order and decency overthrow,
Clever or dull or frail or strong,
Most of them shudder at doing wrong.

This I'll say for the men I know:
  Most of them want to be clean and true;
  In spite of the selfish things they do
Most of them try, as they come and go,
  To leave some glory for men to view.
A few turn traitor to God and state,
But most of the men I know walk straight.

Prayer for the Home

Peace, unto this house, I pray,
Keep terror and despair away;
Shield it from evil and let sin
Never find lodging room within.
May never in these walls be heard
The hateful or accusing word.

Grant that its warm and mellow light
May be to all a beacon bright,
A flaming symbol that shall stir
The beating pulse of him or her
Who finds this door and seems to say,
"Here end the trials of the day."

Hold us together, gentle Lord,
Who sit about this humble board;
May we be spared the cruel fate
Of those whom hatreds separate;
Here let love bind us fast, that we
May know the joys of unity.

Lord, this humble house we'd keep
Sweet with play and calm with sleep.
Help us so that we may give
Beauty to the lives we live.
Let Thy love and let Thy grace
Shine upon our dwelling place.

Manhood

What is manhood, boasted much,
Something we can sense or touch?
Can it be a brilliant thing
Like a jewel in a ring?
Can a teller in a bank
Add it up and place its rank?
Can surveyors draw a line
Separating yours from mine,
Marking with their rigid arts
Where it ends and where it starts?

What is manhood? How and when
Comes this treasured thing to men?
When depleted is the store,
Can a rich man order more,
Or a poor man from his lot
Sell to him who has it not?
Can you save it, would you say,
For the far-off rainy day,
Spurning many a simple need
For one great and glorious deed?

What is manhood? Tell us, sage!
Printed letters on a page?
Victory wreaths or medals bright?
Any cornered beast will fight,

Any man who's trouble free
Very fair will seem to be.
So, I fancy, deeper lies
This rare gift which mortals prize:
'Tis the thought and not the deed,
'Tis the spirit, not the creed.

What is manhood, boasted much?
Nothing we can hold or touch.
'Tis for truth to battle on
When the last false friend is gone;
It is living, conscience clear,
Day by day and year by year,
Suffering loss and taking gain,
Letting neither leave a stain;
Being warrior, neighbor, friend,
Brave and patient to the end.

I Believe

I believe in friendship, and I believe in trees,
And I believe in hollyhocks a-swaying in the breeze,
And I believe in robins and roses white and red,
And rippling brooks and rivers and blue skies overhead,
And I believe in laughter, and I believe in love,
And I believe the daffodils believe in God above.

I am no unbeliever. I know that men are true,
I know the joy of summer time when skies above are blue,
I know there is no earthly power can shape a budding rose,
Or bring a daisy into bloom; with all that wisdom knows
It could not fashion, if it would, the humblest blade of grass
Or stretch a living carpet where the weary travelers pass.

I believe in friendship, for I have found it good,
And I believe in kindly words, for I have understood;

My faith is founded on the years and all that I have seen,
Something of God I've looked upon no matter where I've been.
Within a swamp but yesterday a lily smiled at me
And only God could set it there to bloom for me to see.

Contentment

Give me to look at life and be
  Contented with my share,
To love my spreading maple tree,
  The robins nesting there;
To find within my roses few
All that a million blooms could do.

Make me content with what is mine
  And put my heart at ease,
I have in every plant and vine
  All that a rich man sees.
Not many tulips bloomed this spring,
But each one was a lovely thing!

Teach me to value what I own
  And let me clearly see
The charm in every petal blown
  Upon the breeze to me;
The laughter here as sweetly rings
As in the palaces of kings.

Not in excess of luxuries lie
  The happiness men crave,
The rose that loves the dew would die
  If deluged by a wave;
Teach me this simple truth to know—
Past peace of mind we cannot go.

Things Work Out

Because it rains when we wish it wouldn't,
Because men do what they often shouldn't,
Because crops fail, and plans go wrong—
Some of us grumble all day long.
But somehow, in spite of the care and doubt,
It seems at the last that things work out.

Because we lose where we hoped to gain,
Because we suffer a little pain,
Because we must work when we'd like to play—
Some of us whimper along life's way.
But somehow, as day always follow the night,
Most of our troubles work out all right.

Because we cannot forever smile,
Because we must trudge in the dust awhile,
Because we think that the way is long—
Some of us whimper that life's all wrong.
But somehow we live and our sky grows bright,
And everything seems to work out all right.

So bend to your trouble and meet your care,
For the clouds must break, and the sky grow fair.
Let the rain come down, as it must and will,
But keep on working and hoping still.
For in spite of the grumblers who stand about,
Somehow, it seems, all things work out.

Hypocrisy

It is all in vain to preach of the truth
To the eager ears of a trusting youth;
If, whenever the lad is standing by,
He sees you cheat and he hears you lie.
Fine words may grace the advice you give,
But youth will learn from the way you live.

Honor's a word that a thief may use,
High-sounding language the base may choose.
Speech is empty and preaching vain,
Though the truth shines clear and the lesson's plain;
If you play false, he will turn away,
For your life must square to the things you say.

He won't tread the path of your righteous talk,
But will follow the path which you daily walk.
"Not as I do, but do as I say"
Won't win him to follow the better way.
Through the thin veneer of your speech he'll see,
Unless you're the man you would have him be.

The longer you live you will find this true:
As you would teach, you must also do.
Rounded sentences, smooth and fair,
Were better not said if your deeds aren't square.
If you'd teach him to live to his very best,
You must live your life to the selfsame test.

A Plea for Growth

Let me grow taller with the years,
Above the petty things of pride;
Let me look out and far and wide
Beyond the underbrush of spite,
The bickerings o'er wrong and right,
The little meannesses of life,
The loss or gain of selfish strife,
And let me see, when I grow tall,
High purpose glowing through it all.

Let me grow bigger with the years,
Too big to do the petty thing
Which for advantage leaves a sting;
Too big to sneer at simple worth
And honest toil and gentle mirth;
Too big, no matter where I am,
To try to hold my place with sham;
Too big, if I possess a foe,
To strike him with a coward's blow.

Let me grow wiser through the years—
Wiser in gentleness and truth,
Wiser in knowledge of the youth,
Wiser in living. Let me learn
That wheresoever I may turn,
Some beauty glows; that wealth nor fame
Can ne'er surpass an honest name.
And let this growth in wisdom be
Such as to make a man of me.

A Prayer

Lord, let me do my little part
With courage and a willing heart.
Open my eyes that I may see,
However dark the day may be,
However rough the road I fare,
The purpose of the cross I bear.

Lord, let me wake when morning breaks
Undaunted by my old mistakes.
Let me arise as comes the sun
Glad for the task that must be done,
Rejoicing I have strength to give
Some beauty to the life I live.

Lord, let me hear the kindlier things,
The morning song the robin sings,
The laughter of the children near,
Their merry whisperings in my ear,
My neighbor's greeting at the gate,
Let these shut out the speech of hate.

Lord, let me see the beauty here,
The sky above me bright and clear,
The smile upon a friendly face,
The charm of health and all its grace,
The roses blooming everywhere,
In spite of hurt and grief and care.

Lord, strengthen me that I may keep
My faith, though bitterly I weep.
Grant me undaunted to remain
Through every storm of care and pain.
Lord, let me do my little part
With courage and a willing heart.

Uninstructed

"I'm going to send you down to earth,"
Said God to me one day,
"I'm giving you what men call 'birth'—
To-night you'll start away;
I want you there to live with men
Until I call you back again."

I trembled as I heard Him speak,
Yet knew that I must go;
I felt His hand upon my cheek,
And wished that I might know
Just what on earth would be my task,
And timidly I dared to ask.

"Tell me before I start away
What Thou would have me do;
What message would Thou have me say?
When shall my work be through?
That I may serve Thee on the earth,
Tell me the purpose of my birth."

God smiled at me and softly said:
"Oh, you shall find your task.
I want you free life's paths to tread,
So do not stay to ask.
Remember, if your best you do,
That I shall ask no more of you."

How often, as my work I do,
So commonplace and grim,
I sit and sigh and wish I knew
If I am pleasing Him.
I wonder if, with every test,
I've truly tried to do my best.

The Good World

The Lord must have liked us, I say when I see
The bloom of the rose and the green of the tree,
The flash of the wing of a bird flitting by,
The gold of the grain and the blue of the sky,
The clover below and the tall pines above—
Oh, there's something about us the good Lord must love.

The Lord must have liked us, I say when I stand
Where the waves like an army come into the land,
With the gulls riding high on the crest of the breeze
And the ducks flying north in their echelon V's,
The sun slipping down into liquefied gold—
Oh, it's then the great love of the Lord I behold.

The Lord must have liked us, I say at the dawn
When the diamonds of dew gleam and glow on the lawn,
And the birds from their throats pour the red wine
of song
As if life held no burden of sorrow or wrong;
The Lord must have loved us, I whisper just then,
To give such a world to the children of men.

The Lord must have liked us, I say as I pass
The nest of a meadow lark deep in the grass,
Or hear in the distance the quail calling clear
And know that his mate and his babies are near;
Oh, I say to myself as His wonders I see,
The Lord loves us all or this never would be.

The Spirit

Hold fast and falter not,
  Live out your time;
  Nor rust nor rime,
Nor failure's bitter toll
Can scar the soul.

What matters is not loss
  Which men deplore,
  The sting of bruises sore
Nor hunger unappeased—
But is God pleased?

Serve not your pride,
  That way lies shame.
  Bear if you must men's blame
But, high above the crowd,
Let God be proud.

Not what you've won shall count
  In life's strange race;
  The humblest post or place
May see its hero crowned
Whom fame had never found.

Glory and hurt are kin,
  Forgotten with the years,
  Vanish both smiles and tears;
Be you not turned aside—
God knows what you have tried.

Envy

Time was when a king of the olden days,
  Disturbed by his fretful clan,
Sent ministers forth, both south and north,
  In search of a happy man.

"Go find me a man with his heart content,
  Who maketh no wish for more;
Let the search be had till you find one glad,
  One glad with his present store."

"You have health," said they, to a woodsman tanned,
  "And so have your children three;
You are truly blessed, for that gift is best"—
  "I would I were rich," said he.

"You have gold," they said, to a man of wealth,
  "You can buy what is ever sold."
"Yes," said he, "but I'd happier be
  With the strength of the woodsman bold."

Then they found them a man with a well-filled purse,
  And sturdy and strong was he,
But he said with a sigh: "No child have I,
  But the woodsman there has three."

They searched them high and they searched them low
And back to the king they went,
And they said: "No man in this royal clan
Sits down by his fire content.

"The woodsman sighs for the rich man's gold,
And the rich man vows that he
Would give his wealth for the woodsman's health,
Or even his children three.

"None thinketh himself by the good Lord blessed,
But counteth his neighbor glad,
And is sure that he would happier be
If the neighbor's joy he had."

There is none who knoweth life's joys complete,
For so do God's blessings fall
That all are blessed as He deemeth best,
But none may have them all.

Sunrise

To-day I saw the sun come up, like Neptune from the sea,
I saw him light a cliff with gold and wake a distant tree;
I saw him shake his shaggy head and laugh the night away
And toss unto a sleeping world another golden day.

The waves, which had been black and cold, came in with silver crests,
I saw the sunbeams gently wake the song birds in their nests.
The slow-retreating night slipped back, and strewn
on field and lawn,
On every blade of grass I saw the jewels of the dawn.

Never was monarch ushered in with such a cavalcade;
No hero bringing victory home has seen such wealth displayed.
In honor of the coming day, the humblest plant and tree
Stood on the curbstone of the world in radiant livery.

Pageants of splendor man may plan with robes of burnished gold,
On horses from Arabia may prance the knights of old;
Heralds on silver horns may blow, and kings come riding in,
But I have seen God's pageantry—I've watched a day begin!

A New Year's Plea

Lord, let me stand in the thick of the fight,
  Let me bear what I must without whining;
Grant me the wisdom to do what is right,
  Though a thousand false beacons are shining.

Let me be true as the steel of a blade,
  Make me bigger than skillful or clever;
Teach me to cling to my best, unafraid,
  And harken to false gospels, never.

Let me be brave when the burden is great,
  Faithful when wounded by sorrow;
Teach me, when troubled, with patience to wait
  The better and brighter to-morrow.

Spare me from hatred and envy and shame,
  Open my eyes to life's beauty;
Let not the glitter of fortune or fame
  Blind me to what is my duty.

Let me be true to myself to the end,
  Let me stand to my task without whining;
Let me be right as a man, as a friend,
  Though a thousand false beacons are shining.

The Non-Believer

The non-believer is a man
  Who lets the morning sunshine in
And thinks by chance this world began
  As men throw dice and lose or win;
He sees the violets bloom and blow,
But not the power which makes them grow.

Chance charted every planet's course!
  By chance the summer follows spring!
Chance gave to man the faithful horse
  And made the swallow fleet of wing!
How these things came he doesn't know,
He thinks they merely happened so.

Oh, what a jumble there would be
  If chance were shaping beasts and men.
Could blind chance once repeat a tree,
  Or bring the June rose back again?
The simplest truth we've learned to know,
To-morrow chance might overthrow.

Without confusion or mistake
  There is a power which rules us all,
A higher law we cannot break,
  An eye that sees the sparrow's fall.
In every twig and leaf and blade
I see God's handiwork displayed.

"What did you gather of worth and pride?"
Said the Angel of the Lord.
"Little by skill," the soul replied
"And nothing by the sword;
I lived the span of my years and died,
And I gave when I could afford."

"You bring no more than you took away"
Said the Angel, soft and low,
"Neither fame nor fortune marks your stay
Of toil on the earth below;
And I fancy now you are going to say
It wasn't worth while to go."

"I saw the light in my baby's eye
And I felt her hand in mine;
I treasured her love as the days went by
Though I builded no lasting sign;
Of my time on earth, I should say that I
Had blessings nine times nine.

"And a friend I had who was tried and true
Who shared in my bit of woe;
He wept whenever a grief I knew
And smiled when the hurt would go,
And all that I suffered I'd brave anew
Another such friend to know.

"Oh, it's little I gathered of earthly pride
And it's little I did of worth;
But to sit again at my own fireside
I'd pass through another birth."
"Love and a friend," the Angel replied,
"Are the two great joys of earth."

Science and Faith

With argument we spent the night,
  He for his science and its fact,
I for the faith which sheds a light
  The least among us to attract.

He must be sure beyond the doubt,
  Must hold the test tube in his hand,
And from his reckonings cast out
  All that he fails to understand.

By reason only would he move,
  By judgment cold and fact severe,
Discarding all he cannot prove,
  Accepting naught that isn't clear.

Said I: "We never can agree,
  And vainly here we now dispute;
Your science tells you 'tis the tree
  Which bears the blossom and the fruit.

"You hack the roots, the tree will die,
And this your reason can explain;
But vainly will your science try
To bring to life that tree again.

"But when I see an apple tree
Full fruited in an orchard grow,
My faith sees that divinity
Which gave it life and shaped it so."

And thus we parted. "You," said I,
"May have your science if you choose,
But on my faith I must rely,
For naught is left if that I lose."

A Beaten Man Talks

When the blow fell and his hopes went out
He looked at the wreckage strewn all about,
His dream-ship lost in a cruel sea—
"I must make the best of what is," said he.

He was hurt and weary, but still erect
And he said, as the dust from his clothes he flecked:
"I had hoped to be spared such a crushing blow,
But life must be faced as it is, you know.

"'Tis vain to whimper or call to mind
What might have been had the fates proved kind.
Had I turned to the left, 'twere a different case,
But I turned to the right, so this I face.

"To-morrow, as one who has known defeat
And lost his dream, I shall walk the street.
Now this is my problem, beginning here,
Where shall I be in another year?

"I'm a beaten man now. Oh, that fact is true,
I've been given a beaten man's task to do,
And a beaten man's duty is very plain,
He must gather his hopes and begin again."

Life Is a Problem

Life is a mystery, all of man's history
  Tells us but little of how it began.
All earth can show of it,
All we can know of it
  Give scarce a hint of its purpose and plan.
Life is not altered by what men have guessed of it,
He is the wisest who just makes the best of it.

What does it matter to tailor or hatter,
  Butcher or baker or truckmen who drive,
How it all started?
Clear-eyed and warm-hearted
  Each is a person and each is alive!
Life is a problem and this is the test of it,
He is the wisest who just makes the best of it.

Life has its sadness, its goodness and badness,
  Nor all of man's wisdom can alter that fact.
To this should the living
Their full thought be giving,
  How in its grief and its joy shall we act?
Surely if happiness here be the quest of it,
He is the wisest who just makes the best of it.

A Book

"Now"—said a good book unto me—
"Open my pages and you shall see
Jewels of wisdom and treasures fine,
Gold and silver in every line,
And you may claim them if you but will Open my pages and take your fill.

"Open my pages and run them o'er,
Take what you choose of my golden store.
Be you greedy, I shall not care—
All that you seize I shall gladly spare;
There is never a lock on my treasure doors,
Come—here are my jewels, make them yours!

"I am just a book on your mantel shelf,
But I can be part of your living self;
If only you'll travel my pages through,
Then I will travel the world with you.
As two wines blended make better wine,
Blend your mind with these truths of mine.

"I'll make you fitter to talk with men,
I'll touch with silver the lines you pen,
I'll lead you nearer the truth you seek,
I'll strengthen you when your faith grows weak—
This place on your shelf is a prison cell,
Let me come into your mind to dwell!"

To a Friend

When I shall run my fortune through
To balance life's long bank account,
I shall not, as the misers do,
In money seek some large amount;
But I shall claim those treasures which
Such sordid souls can't comprehend.
In countless ways God made me rich!
It was my luck to be your friend!

Some there must be with wealth and fame
To boast their selfish, paltry deeds,
But I shall say 'twas mine to claim
A privilege man sorely needs.
A gentler blessing God bestowed
On me unto the journey's end,
To share the burden and the road
It was my luck to be your friend.

Brave, gentle soul, my life has run
Through kindly channels and serene,
In all that I have ever done
I've had your strength on which to lean.
In that I'm richer far than they
Who have but yellow gold to spend,
For I can proudly boast to-day
It was my luck to be your friend.

A Day Is Not So Long

From dawn to dusk is not so long
When it is spent in mirth and song;
Night swiftly falls to close the day
That's free from care and rich with play.
The hands upon the clock turn fast,
The happiest hours are soonest past,
But oh, the leaden feet of care
Make long the time of our despair,
And grief and hurt and shame and wrong
Make every troubled day seem long.

Let me be true for just to-day,
Whatever waits along my way!
Surely from daybreak until night
I can be faithful to the right;
Can face one day of blustering rain
And bitter cold, and not complain.
What though I fare to work or play,
Unchanged's the measure of the day,
The bright hours do no faster go
Than those which bear the freight of woe.

'Tis faltering faith and heavy doubt
Which seem to stretch the mornings out,
If pleasure's day so swiftly flies,
For one day can I not be wise?

Can I not face one day of care
And brave the heartache of despair?
Have I not courage stern enough
One day to bear with life's rebuff?
Though long it seems to troubled hearts,
Even the day of grief departs.

Not long the day when laughter rings,
Not long the day which pleasure brings,
Nor longer is the day of woe—
'Tis but man's thinking makes it so.
Then let me, though I smile or grieve,
Keep faith with all from dawn till eve.
Let me each day, through every test,
With courage hold to what is best.
To-morrow waits—blue skies or gray,
I have but to be true to-day.

Blessings

By the blue that bends above us,
By the smiling friends who love us,
By the laughter of a baby
  And the babbling of a brook;
By the glad Junes with their roses,
And each happy day which closes
With the prayers of little children
  Everywhere God turns to look,
We are blessed in countless ways
Through the number of our days.

By the hope which gilds to-morrow,
By the faith which sweetens sorrow,
By the beauty all around us
  When the dawn of day is fair;
By the health which God hath lent us
For the tasks for which he sent us,
We are richly compensated
  For the burdens we must bear;
And though tears of grief may fall,
God has blessed us, one and all.

By the glad smile of a neighbor,
By the joy of honest labor,
By the singing of the kettle
  And the home where we may rest;
By the true friend standing by us
Through the hours when burdens try us,
By uncounted little pleasures
  All our lives are richly blessed;
Never year nor day nor minute
But holds something lovely in it.

The Little Deeds

Lord, I may fail to reach the heights of fame,
  The greater deeds must fall to stronger men,
But there's a glory which I ought to claim—
  And failing that, how shall I answer then?

I can be true within my little sphere,
  I can be kind and gentle to the end;
What though I'm bound by narrow limits here,
  Still I am strong enough to be a friend.

Surely I can be brave enough to speak
  Sweet words of comfort in an hour of need,
To cheer the lonely and sustain the weak
  And light hope's candle with a kindly deed.

What if the throng for me shall never shout?
  The few who know me well may speak my praise,
And if I give no cruel cause to doubt,
  I have not failed them in their troubled days.

There is so much that truly marks the man.
  The greatest conquerors are not always kind,
Who seeks for cheers oft serves a selfish plan;
  One may be base and have a brilliant mind.

Perchance I'll fail through all the years ahead
  To win the glory which high conquest brings;
But missing that, I would not have it said
  I also failed in countless little things.

The Brave Hearts

Just a little sunshine,
  Just a little rain,
Just a little laughter,
  Just a little pain,
Now and then a burden
  All our strength to test,
But the brave go singing
  Toward the golden west.

None get all the laughter,
  None get all the tears,
Joys and griefs are portioned
  Through the passing years.
Sorrows come to try us,
  Cruel seems the pain
But the brave hearts ever
  Glorious remain.

Everywhere you'll meet them,
  Patient, gentle, true,
Knowing all you suffer,
  For they've suffered, too.
Storms have raged above them,
  They have known defeat,
But they've changed life's bitters
  Into memories sweet.

Faith has kept them gentle,
  Faith has kept them brave,
They've strewn sorrow's roses
  On a little grave,
But with hearts courageous
  Still they march along,
Singing, for the living,
  Their triumphant song.

If They Could Write

What glorious news they'd have to tell
If only they could write to-day,
Those who have gone afar to dwell
Where all the glorious spirits stay.
In fancy here I set it down,
What Marjorie would pen for me:
"I've touched the hem of Jesus' gown,
The way they did in Galilee.

"I've smiled at Mary Magdalene,
She visits all the mothers here;
And John the Baptist I have seen,
And all the saints that you revere.
Oh, there is much to see and do,
There's something always going on—
Tell all the boys and girls I knew
I've shaken hands with Washington.

"Longfellow has his children's hour,
And Riley makes us laugh with glee.
I wish I had some magic power
To picture everything I see.

But when you take your Bible down
And read of Matthew, Mark or John,
Or any soul that gained the crown,
Just think I've seen them, every one!"

No letter comes from Marjorie,
And yet I fancy now and then
The glorious tales she'd tell to me
If such a missive she could pen.
And thinking thus, I am content
To bear the loneliness and wait,
Because I know her days are spent
In all the company of the great.

The Things I Must Not Do

Some things there are I must not do:
To self I must not be untrue,
I must not for a profit's sake
A false or mean advantage take,
Or risk an everlasting stain
For selfish pride or paltry gain.

I must not thoughtlessly deride
The things which are my neighbor's pride,
Or hold my head so high that he
May fear to make a friend of me.
I must not, though it be my right,
Disturb his comfort, day or night.

I must not disregard life's laws,
Or think myself secure because
The vile may prosper and the cheat
May seem to flourish in deceit.
If happiness I hope to reap,
Both health and honor I must keep.

Lord, when temptation comes along,
'Tis then, I pray Thee, make me strong.
Let neither fame, nor wealth, nor prize,
To what is manly blind my eyes.
Let it be said, when life is through,
Some things there were I would not do.

A Wish

This I should like to be:
  Big in my little way,
Malice and envy free,
  Strong through the day;
Willing my task to do,
  Patient and fair,
Unto my fellows true,
  Humble in prayer.

Past purse and pride I'd go,
  Striving to find
More ways than now I know
  How to be kind;
Faithful to every trust,
  True to my light,
Honest and clean and just,
  Keeping the right.

When the brief race is run
  This be my praise:
Whether I've lost or won,
  Manly my ways;
Though in life's mire and scum
  Often I fall,
God grant my soul may come
  Clean through it all.

Neighborly

Not great, but neighborly I'd be,
With eyes that are awake to see
The tender little lines of care
Upon the faces everywhere—
With wisdom that can understand
From just the pressure of a hand,
Or just a word, voiced soft and low,
Whether the heart be glad or no.

Along my little path I ask
Full strength to meet my daily task,
And then this knowledge: that there beat
No truer hearts than those I meet;
That all that life has power to give
Lies round about me where I live;
That rich or poor, unto the end,
Or high or low, a friend's a friend!

Not far I'd travel. There's no need!
Here I can do the kindly deed.
Here I can laugh and live and learn.
Here all the lights as brightly burn

As those which shine on haunts afar.
Here troops of merry children are,
Grown men and women good to know,
What more can distant scenes bestow?

Not great, but neighborly I'd be.
Would better know the ones I see
From day to day, and better share
Their fleeting joys and times of care.
I'd speak with deeper meaning, too,
The morning's greeting: "How d'you do!"
And reap from life as much of love
As those who reach the heights above.

Dark Days

Life has laughter in it,
  Smiles and songs of glee,
But the care-free minute
  Stays not constantly;
Cares will come to vex us,
  Burdens we must bear,
Problems grave perplex us
  As through life we fare.

Life has hours of duty,
  Days of trial, too,
Ugliness and beauty
  Age has wandered through;
Hills to climb and hollows
  Where our feet may rest;
After pleasure, follows
  Many a cruel test.

None forever dancing,
  None forever sad;
Yesterday's romancing
  Was a joy we had;
Now our hearts are aching
  With the hurt of grief,
Shall we, God forsaking,
  Falter in belief?

God was in our pleasures,
  God was good to give;
In the joy He measures
  God is seen to live;
Shall He then desert us
  In our times of fear,
When our sorrows hurt us
  Will not God draw near?

Pain and joy are blended
  Ever through the years,
Life, until it's ended,
  Runs through smiles and tears;
And the God who gave us
  Joys which slip away,
Sends his love to save us
  When we meet dismay.

The Effort

When man has done his level best,
I fancy God is satisfied.
He need not be in splendor dressed,
Known north and south and east and west,
Nor tread the paths of pride;
If he is earnest in the test,
God knows how hard he tried.

Not all the good men rise to fame,
Nor all the kings are crowned.
Full many a long forgotten name
Has borne life's battle but to claim
An unremembered mound.
And men from men have suffered blame
When God no fault has found.

'Tis fine to do the splendid deed,
'Tis sweet to reach the goal.
But oft the dreams of men may lead
Them past their strength, to fall and bleed,
And failure signs the scroll.
But 'tis not said we must succeed
To make the perfect soul.

When man has done his level best,
I fancy God is satisfied.
Though night shall find him sore distressed,
Beset by cares, by men oppressed,
His victory denied,
God knows how cruel was the test
And just how hard he tried!

Test of Philosophy

Bill is a philosopher—but Bill has gold to spend,
And Bill can very glibly say that troubles quickly end,
And he can laugh at clouds of care and tell us not to fret—
Bill might well talk a different speech if he were deep in debt.

I've trudged the long and dreary road,
I know the way of pain,
I've had the cold sleet slash my face and felt the stinging rain,
And many a time I've thought of Bill and wondered on the way
If he were burdened down with care just what he'd have to say.

The test of all philosophy is not my neighbor's care,
And I can say to him, "Be brave!
To-morrow may be fair!"
But I have felt the bite of grief, and well I understand
That better far than words of cheer is someone's helping hand.

The cross upon a brother's back to-morrow may be gone,
But now it is a heavy weight while he is trudging on,
And who will lift the load a bit and rest his shoulders sore
Expresses the philosophy the world is hungry for.

Advice

My boy, be easy with your friend.
To him be very glad to lend;
Make smooth his way whene'er you can;
Don't tell his faults to any man.
Spare him your censure; shut your eyes
To little flaws which may arise.
But in your search for fame or pelf,
Do not be easy with yourself.

For others have a gentle way;
Forgive their sins whene'er you may,
But with yourself be strict. Make sure
That fault of yours shall not endure.
See in yourself each trifling flaw,
And make yourself obey the law.
O'erlook the wrongs which others do,
But never blind yourself to you.

Although deceit might win your fight,
Compel your self to do what's right.
Of others' weakness never speak,
But do not let yourself be weak.
Have pity for the many woes
Which every man around you knows;
But when a trial comes to you,
Be glad that you can see it through.

Keep conscience always as your guide
And by its whisperings abide.
Be lenient and kind of heart;
Utter no speech which leaves a smart.
But always wheresoe'er you turn,
Remember, with yourself, be stern.
Be strict in all you say and do,
Not with your neighbors, but with you!

Against Odds

Suppose, for a minute, you stumbled and fell
To the bottom, we'll say, of a ninety-foot well,
And nobody heard you or answered your shout,
Would you lie there and die, and not try to get out?

Suppose you were cornered, we'll say, by a brute,
With no one to throw you a rifle to shoot,
With no one to help in your terrible plight,
Would you give up your life without making a fight?

Well, this little trouble which has you upset
Is nothing compared to what others have met;
So why do you whimper and whine o'er your case,
Why give up and quit without making the race?

Remember, my boy, when you're troubled by doubt,
From caverns of gloom men have worked their way out.
When the Fates have you cornered, your courage must show—
Don't lie down and die at the very first blow.

Our Own World

"It's a friendly world, it's a friendly world,"
Said a genial chap to me.
"There's always a friend who will lend a hand,
Whatever your care may be.
Though some may pass in their eager haste,
And some have never an hour to waste,
And some are backward, and some afraid,
Never for long will you cry for aid.
Oh, troubles may come, but they always end,
In the joy of finding another friend."

"It's a bitter world," said the pessimist.
"It's a selfish world, and cold;
And men think only from day to day,
Of copper and silver and gold.
You can cry for aid till your voice is hoarse,
And never a stranger will change his course.
With a dollar to gain, or a foe to cheat,
Mankind goes hurrying down the street.
And even the friends whom mortals choose
Are merely the men whom they hope to use."

It's a curious world, it's a curious world,
Thought I, when the talk was done.
It's a friendly world, it's a bitter world—
It's a cruel and narrow one!

It must be all that these men have found
As they've lived their lives and journeyed round.
So if one is friendly, the world will be
As friendly and gracious and kind as he.
And if one be selfish or narrow, then
He will find those faults in his fellow-men.

Stone-Throwers

Stone-throwers, is there no wrong you have done?
Are you so clean that you dare to defame
One who has honestly stumbled in shame?
What if your records were bared to the sun?
Have you not cheated and have you not lied,
Played for position and bartered for pride?
How can you stand up and preach about sin,
Knowing the wrong which your smugness shuts in?

Stone-throwers, now if your records are clear
Tell us the pathway such splendor to gain!
Lead us and guide us who suffer life's stain.
If you are blameless, then justly you sneer,
But once spake the Master, to whom all was known:
"Let him without sin come and cast the first stone."
And none of that number could look in His face,
For each in his breast bore the stamp of disgrace.

Stone-throwers, better sweet patience than rage,
We, too, have erred if the world only knew;
Not always unselfish the deeds which we do,
Not without blemish or blot is our page.
Fearless to stand against wrong should we be,
But who of us here from all sinning is free?
Who of us here, when the long race is run,
Will not ask forgiveness for something he's done?

References

Suppose the Lord should say to me, when I get over there:
"Your references I want to see. I hope I'll find them fair.
Where have you lived and worked and played?
Give me the names of those you've known,
Who'll tell the record you have made?"—
I'd mention those I call my own.

I should not give familiar names nor those of persons great,
Nor offer lordly sires and dames my character to state,
But I should say: "They knew me best—my wife and children three,
To what I was they can attest, go question them
of me.

"Send to the little home I tried to keep with mirth aglow,
Better than all the world outside the man I was they know;
Oh Lord, I did not rise to fame; high worth Thou canst not find,
But I preserved my home from shame, and there they'll call me kind."

When at the last the Lord demands my references
from me,
Where all men stand with empty hands to face
eternity,
This I would have as final proof of how my life was spent:
My own to say, "Beneath our roof lived laughter and content."

Faith

This much I know:
  God does not wrong us here,
  Though oft His judgments seem severe
And reason falters 'neath the blow,
  Some day we'll learn 'twas better so.

So oft I've erred
  In trifling matters of my own concern;
  So oft I've blundered at the simplest turn,
Chosen the false path or the foolish word
  That what I call my judgment seems absurd.

My puny reason cries
  Against the bitter and the cruel blows,
  Measuring the large world by the inch it knows,
Seeing all joy and pain through selfish eyes,
  Not knowing hurt and suffering may be wise.

But I have come to see,
  So vast God's love, so infinite His plan
  That it is well it was not left to man
To alter or to say what is to be,
  When reason failed, faith also then would flee.

God knoweth best!
  Through the black night and agony of grief
  Faith whispers low: "Hold fast to your belief!
In time His purpose He shall manifest,
  Then shall you learn how greatly you were blest."

On a Certain Religious Argument

Argue it pro and con as you will,
And flout each other with words,
But the rose will bloom and the summer still
Will bring us the song of birds.

How was He born who came to earth,
With the Godlight in His eyes?
Wrangle and quarrel about His birth,
And yet you shall not be wise.

And what does it matter? The clover blows
And the rose blooms on the tree,
And only the God in heaven knows
How these things come to be.

You take the flower though you cannot say
Why this is red or white,
You accept the warmth of the sun by day
And the light of the stars by night.

You joy in a thousand mysteries
Which your wisdom can't explain,
The green of the grass and the rolling seas
And the gold of the harvest grain.

So why do you bother your heads at all?
And why does your faith grow dim?
You take the flower on the garden wall,
So why will you not take Him?

Grief

I could not utter it last night
  Because the voice was dumb,
But now alone I try to write
  The words which would not come.
When all the bitter tears are dried
  Sometime when you're alone,
You'll find a calm to those denied
  Who never grief have known.

I know the hurt is keen to-day,
  I know the loss is great,
But what if you should go away
  With no one there to wait?
And oh, how lonely Heaven would be
  If all you loved were here,
And there was none you longed to see
  To welcome you, my dear.

If God had spared you every blow
  Which comes to us on earth,
Had shielded you from every woe
  And filled your years with mirth,

And then at last He bade you leave,
Your place above to find,
For weary years you'd sadly grieve
For those you'd left behind.

Oh, you have had a lovely child,
And you have lost a son;
But soon you shall be reconciled
When life's brief time is done;
For Heaven is made of those we love,
The beautiful and true,
And God has taken him above
To build a Heaven for you.

Thanksgiving

Dear Lord, accept our humble prayer
Of thanks for all Thy watchful care,
For yield of field and vine and tree
Our hearts give gratitude to Thee;
Now lies the frost upon the vine,
We see another year decline,
But through the pain and strife and woe
Thy blessings manifestly show.

Dear Lord, for laughter and for song
Which have been ours; for righted wrong,
For steps of progress we have made,
For all the works of art and trade,
For science which has conquered pain
And given hope where hope seemed vain;
For all that helps mankind to live,
This day to Thee our thanks we give.

Dear Lord, despite its pain and strife
We thank Thee for our richer life;
This is a better world for man
Than when this closing year began;
We who have suffered still can find
Proof of Thy love and mercy kind;
In all our works Thy hand we see
And bow in gratitude to Thee.

If all the days were fair
  And every dream came true,
There'd be no need for prayer
  Or faith to guide us through.

If trouble never came
  To test us or affright,
Courage would be a name,
  Success, a cheap delight.

If every day brought mirth
  To mortals as they plod,
If heaven could be on earth
  There'd be no need for God.

'Tis when the storms assail
  And when we're sorely tried,
When all resources fail
  Then God is at our side.

Through darkness and through pain,
  When other aid has flown
And all our strength seems vain,
  He makes His presence known.

And so from hurts that grieve
From anguish and despair,
Come courage to achieve
And faith to conquer care.

We rise to greater heights
Beneath the lash and rod,
Those troubled days and nights
Nearer draw us to God.

A Plea for Faith

O lad o' mine, O lad o' mine, be never coldly dumb
to me!
Whatever care is on your heart, be ever quick to come to me.
Come with the truth upon your tongue, and have no fear or doubt of me—
I have such love for you, my lad, no hurt can drive
it out of me.

O lad o' mine, O lad o' mine, your father God has made of me,
And shamed I'll be, to go to Him, if ever you're afraid of me.
I'll grieve to learn you've done a wrong, but 'twill
be worse distress to me,
To find you've hid behind a lie and would not all confess to me.

O lad o' mine, O lad o' mine, you are the living part
of me—
To find a stranger in my place would surely break
the heart of me.
Keep faith in me; whate'er befalls, I'll stand and share the worst with you.
No friend shall be so true as I—but oh, I must be first with you.

The Salesman Courageous

He came in as a salesman, head erect he said to me:
"I am selling here a product which I think you'd like to see.
It's a handy thing for men folk, it's a useful thing
for wives,
It's a clever new invention made for sharpening carving knives."
And I paid to him a dollar without giving it much thought,
But I've learned some things about him, since that article I bought.

He sold me on the merits of the thing he had to sell,
Never let me guess that morning what a story he could tell;
I thought him somewhat better than the common run of men,
But the burden of his sorrow wasn't even hinted
then.
We were just two busy mortals working out our little lives,
I a writer, he a salesman of a thing for sharpening knives.

Of the losses he had suffered, not a word he spoke
to me,
He came to talk on business, not to ask for sympathy.
He was down through grim misfortune, as I later came to learn,

But was fighting for existence till the wheel of luck should turn,
And was just too game to whimper any sad and sorry tale—
On the merits of his product he would make or lose a sale.

So I hail that fellow's courage and I mark him as a man,
One too big to ask for business on the common beggar's plan.
No apology he offered for the thing he had to sell,
He would not affect my judgment by the sorrows he could tell.
And I give this illustration of one brave man I have met
Who would not display his heartaches for the business he might get.

Do It

If they give a job to you,
  Do it.
Stick right there and see it through,
  Do it.
If they thought you couldn't do
Such a job, and quickly, too,
They'd not give the work to you,
  So do it.

When on you a task is laid,
  Do it.
Jump right in, don't be afraid,
  Do it.
Bosses never walk about
Giving work to men they doubt,
So when they have picked you out,
  Do it.

Stick right there and play the man,
  Do it.
They who ordered think you can,
  Do it.

Never doubt yourself, but say:
"They have faith in me or they
Would not throw this chance my way,
  I'll do it."

Difficult or something new,
  Do it.
It's a sign men trust in you,
  Do it.
If they thought that you'd be weak,
Or possessed a coward's streak,
For another man they'd seek,
  So do it.

A Preference

I think that I would rather see
My children happy at my knee,
My neighbors' smiling faces when
I start from home or come again;
A garden small, but mine to claim,
Than rise unloved to wealth or fame.

I think that I would rather own
The fellowship of those I've known,
Their good opinion and their trust,
Than win by many a cruel thrust
The pomp and riches of a place
Which only knows the fawner's face.

True peace is born of little things,
The song the brave canary sings,
Glad little memories of the past
Which seemed too trivial to last,
But brighter glows throughout the years
As symbols of our smiles and tears.

We write our lives, where'er we dwell,
On those who love and know us well.
Strangers may cheer us from afar,
But neighbors see us as we are.
I'd rather have my worth be told
By happy hearts than glittering gold.

As We Prayed

Often as we watched her there
From our lips there fell this prayer.
"God, give us the pain to bear!
Let us suffer in her place,
Take the anguish from her face,
Soothe her with Thy holy grace."

Then the angels came, and they Took her lovely soul away
From the torture house of clay.
As we'd prayed, they brought release,
Smoothed her brow with gentle peace.
But our pain shall never cease.

Ours is now the hurt to bear,
Ours the anguish and despair,
Ours the agony to share!
When our hearts with grief were stirred,
Thus we prayed and thus were heard,
Shall we fail to keep our word?

Was our promise all in vain?
Would we call her back again
Just to spare ourselves the pain?
We are hurt, oh, that is true!
Desolate and lonely, too,
Suffering as we pledged to do.

Lovely now her life shall be Safe through all eternity,
Always beautiful to see;
Now the pain is ours to know,
But we prayed to bear this blow
That she need not suffer so.

Consolation

What comfort have I now to give,
  To soothe the heart, to which has come
  That grief which leaves our senses numb?
That grief which makes it pain to live
  And darkens every path, and seems
  The end of all our happy dreams.
Oh, friend of mine, be brave, and know
That never will she suffer so.

Together we have prayed that she Might longer stay with her caress
  To fill the day with happiness;
But, oh, what bargain could there be,
  What pledge or promise could we make
  To save ourselves this present ache
And keep her here? Ten years? Ah, no!
'Twould hurt us then to let her go.

There is no time that we could set
  For parting. We who must remain
  Are never ready for such pain.
Ever our prayer would be: "Not yet!
  Not yet, dear God, another day,
  With us let our beloved stay."
We must believe when falls the blow
That wisely God has willed it so.

God has her in His keeping now,
  Angels attend her through the day,
  Never her feet shall go astray,
Never shall anguish line her brow,
  Never a bitter thought shall find
  Harsh lodgment in her gentle mind.
Lovely her girlhood shall remain,
Safe from the hurt of time and pain.

I must be strict with me! Too oft I find
Unto myself 'tis easy to be kind.
Duty declares: "This is the thing to do!"
But, Self, I am so lenient with you.
I hear you murmur, "That is hard!" and so
I choose the easy way and let it go.
I know the right; I know what ought to be;
I also know I should be strict with me.
I should compel me with what strength is mine
To live my life precisely to the line.

To others' faults I'll gladly shut my eyes;
Therein I think the joy of friendship lies.
I will not hold them fast to rules and laws,
Insisting grimly on each written clause;
I'll grant them favors whensoe'er I may,
Deal gently with them in their work or play,
Make life for them as pleasant as I can,
For that is conduct which befits a man.
But, Self, what oft I let another do
I must not ever countenance in you.

One breaks the rules! That is not my concern.
To keep the rules is what I have to learn.
He does this thing or that, and I consent;
By that I show my brotherly intent.
But I must never seek, the while I live,
The slight advantage I am pleased to give.
'Tis good on others favors to bestow,
But unto me no favors must I show;
In every test, whatever it may be,
Let come what may, I must be strict with me.

The Future Great

Turn to the future, boy! There wait
To-morrow's leaders strong and great.
  Across the far-flung sky of fame
  Full many a meteor shall flame.
A book some struggling youth shall pen
Shall stir once more the hearts of men.
  The world must have its conquerors new
  And one of them may well be you!

Read with amazement this man's tale!
A poor boy once, whose cheeks were pale,
  Starting with nothing but the will
  Some useful post on earth to fill,
Now rich, and leading countless men.
This story shall be told again—
  Some one this selfsame feat shall do;
  Take heart, my boy, it may be you.

Nothing is strange about it, lad;
New strength, new vigor, must be had.
  Brave youth must rise! Each age demands
  Clear brains, strong hearts and willing hands.
There is no limit placed on fame;
'Tis something any boy can claim.
  Hold fast! Work hard, be strong, be true—
  The future keeps a place for you!

Think not that every battle's won
Or all the deeds of splendor done;
  There's not a field upon the earth
  But waits to bring new fame to birth.
Poor boys with glory shall be crowned,
And men shall pass their stories round.
  This great success which thrills you through,
  To-morrow may belong to you.

You

You are the fellow that has to decide
Whether you'll do it or toss it aside.
You are the fellow who makes up your mind
Whether you'll lead or will linger behind,
Whether you'll try for the goal that's afar
Or just be contented to stay where you are.
Take it or leave it. Here's something to do!
Just think it over—It's all up to you!

What do you wish? To be known as a shirk,
Known as a good man who's willing to work,
Scorned for a loafer or praised by your chief,
Rich man or poor man or beggar or thief?
Eager or earnest or dull through the day,
Honest or crooked? It's you who must say!
You must decide in the face of the test
Whether you'll shirk it or give it your best.

Nobody here will compel you to rise;
No one will force you to open your eyes;
No one will answer for you yes or no,
Whether to stay there or whether to go.

Life is a game, but it's you who must say,
Whether as cheat or as sportsman you'll play.
Fate may betray you, but you settle first
Whether to live to your best or your worst.

So, whatever it is you are wanting to be,
Remember, to fashion the choice you are free.
Kindly or selfish, or gentle or strong,
Keeping the right way or taking the wrong,
Careless of honor or guarding your pride,
All these are questions which you must decide.
Yours the selection, whichever you do;
The thing men call character's all up to you!

Choosing a Friend

If he will add one touch of grace
Unto your conduct or your mind,
Or help you to a loftier place,
Then to his petty faults be blind.
If he inspires one nobler thought
By which your spirit can ascend,
Then, son of mine, I'd say you ought
To cherish him and be his friend.

If in his play you find him fair,
If to his vows you find him true,
If walking with him anywhere
You have no dread of what he'll do;
If in his company you feel
Yourself a better man to be,
Then you have come to friendship real—
A comrade worth your love is he.

If he is higher bound and tries
To reach the finer things of earth,
Yet does not common truths despise,
Or sneer at men of lesser worth;
Then be he rich or poor, my son,
Stay by him to the journey's end.
For deep as this must friendship run,
All this it takes to make a friend.

Look to the other side! If he
Be clever, witty, worldly-wise,
Yet lacks the character to be
A man, in all the word implies,
If seeking pleasure's selfish end,
He cares not who may grieve or frown,
Then never make of him your friend,
For surely will he drag you down.

Philosophy

This is all the world will ask:
Do your best with every task.
Take your share of cloud and rain,
But do not bitterly complain;
Don't go moping round the place
With a sad and gloomy face.
Other folks have troubles, too,
Much like those which come to you.

Rain is rain and care is care,
Wrong and loss are everywhere,
Rank injustice stalks about,
Life is hard to reason out;
Now and then you'll wonder why
Some are laughing when you sigh,
You will stumble, fall, but then
Rise and go to work again.

Do your best, and let it go.
Do not wince at every blow—
Other people suffer care,
Other men have hurts to bear,

Other men by griefs are bowed,
But they do not cry aloud;
They would never have it known
What they suffer when alone.

That all men have cause to sigh
Only foolish tongues deny.
Care is here. There's none so strong
But must sometime suffer wrong.
You will weep and you will frown,
You will see the rain come down,
But be big enough to bear
Single-handed with your care.

Prayer for the New Year

Grant me the strength from day to day
To bear what burdens come my way,
Grant me throughout this bright New Year
More to endure and less to fear,
Help me to live that I may be
From spite and petty malice free.

Let me not bitterly complain
When cherished hopes of mine prove vain,
Or spoil with deeds of hate and rage
Some fair to-morrow's spotless page;
Lord, as the days shall come and go
In courage let me stronger grow.

Let me with patience stand and wait,
A friend to all who find my gate,
Keep me from envy and from scorn;
As shines the sun with every morn
On great and low, so let me give
My love to all who round me live.

Lord, as the New Year dawns to-day
Help me to put my faults away,
Let me be big in little things,
Grant me the joy which friendship brings,
Keep me from selfishness and spite,
Let me be wise in what is right.

A happy New Year! Grant that I
May bring no tear to any eye,
When this New Year in time shall end
Let it be said I've played the friend;
Have lived and loved and labored here
And made of it a happy year.

Career

These things you'll need to see you through:
The pluck to face a problem new,
The will to do the best you can
And win or lose, to play the man;
Some thought for others toiling near,
This warms with friendship your career;
Then crowning all, when grief comes on,
Unfaltering faith to lean upon.

Your wit a little while may reap
A few successes, paltry, cheap;
With selfishness you may obtain
The fortune which you hope to gain,
But if you have not that within
Your soul which whispers through the din
Of turmoil: "Be you patient, wait!"
Failure shall sweep you to your fate.

When blows the tempest, and to you
Come difficulties, strangely new,
If you, unschooled to danger, stand,
Luck will desert your trembling hand;

If in your happier days you've shown
No thought for others, but alone
Have lived; when fond hopes fade,
You'll sigh for friends you could have made.

Guard your career by faith! For when
You too must weep as other men,
And, helpless to explain or stay
The call which takes your love away,
If you have not that sure belief
That God is with you in your grief,
Through many a bleak and barren year
You'll stifle in your own career.

Lord, Make a Regular Man Out of Me

This I would like to be—braver and bolder,
Just a bit wiser because I am older.
Just a bit kinder to those I may meet,
Just a bit manlier taking defeat;
This for the New Year my wish and my plea—
Lord, make a regular man out of me.

This I would like to be—just a bit finer,
More of a smiler and less of a whiner,
Just a bit quicker to stretch out my hand
Helping another who's struggling to stand.
This is my prayer for the New Year to be,
Lord, make a regular man out of me.

This I would like to be—just a bit fairer,
Just a bit better, and just a bit squarer,
Not quite so ready to censure and blame,
Quicker to help every man in the game,
Not quite so eager men's failings to see,
Lord, make a regular man out of me.

This I would like to be—just a bit truer,
Less of the wisher and more of the doer,
Broader and bigger, more willing to give,
Living and helping my neighbor to live!
This for the New Year my prayer and my plea—
Lord, make a regular man out of me.

Lines for A Friend's House

God bless this house and all within it,
Let no harsh spirit enter in it.
Let none approach who would betray,
None with a bitter word to say.
Shield it from harm and sorrow's sting,
Here let the children's laughter ring.
Grant that these friends from year to year
Shall build their happiest memories here.

God bless this house and those who love it,
Fair be the skies which bend above it.
May never anger's thoughtless word
Within these sheltering walls be heard.
May all who rest beside this fire
And then depart, glad thoughts inspire,
And make them feel who close the door,
Friendship has graced their home once more.

God bless this house and those who keep it,
In the sweet oils of gladness steep it.
Endow these walls with lasting wealth,
The light of love, the glow of health,
The palm of peace, the charm of mirth,
Good friends to sit around the hearth,
And with each nightfall perfect rest—
Here let them live their happiest.

Faithless

Poor is the man who counts this life
By days of pleasure and of strife,
Who thinks this paltry gift below
Is all that he shall ever know,
And wails no poverty is worse
Than is the poverty of purse.

He has no faith to lean upon,
No source of strength when hope is gone.
He feels the winds of winter blow,
He sees the cruel ice and snow,
And thinks men suffer grief and pain,
Love and are loved, and all in vain.

Yet he who cannot see the snow
And feel the winds of winter blow
With faith that spring and summer wait
With all their beauty at the gate,
Is poorer and more wretched than
The pale, decrepit beggar man.

He may be rich in purse, but when
He shares the common fate of men,
And one he loves is called away,
If all his joy was housed in clay
And he has seen no spirit there,
Then he is naked to despair.

No God to turn to with his prayer,
None for his absent ones to care,
No life beyond this stretch of years,
No future hope to dry his tears,
Then, in his darkest hour of need,
The faithless man is poor indeed.

Training

Let me not walk the way
Head high and blindly;
Let me go through to-day
Bravely and kindly.
I have been taught the truth,
Well do I know it—
Trained from my earliest youth—
Now let me show it!

I know how men despise
Hearts cold and cruel;
Honor's a thing to prize—
Life's fairest jewel.
I know what's falsely gained
Has no joy in it;
I have been truly trained,
Fit for each minute.

Lord, they have told me all,
Told and repeated;
Onto them shame shall fall
Once they have cheated.
I have been taught the way
At desk and altar,
Why should I then to-day
Fail them or falter?

They have not let me grow
    Blind to life's beauty;
Here without doubt I know
    What is my duty.
Let me then walk the way
    Free from complaining,
Living this little day
    True to my training.

We were sittin' there, and smokin' of our pipes, discussin' things
Like taxes, votes for wimmin, an' the totterin' thrones of kings,
When he ups an' strokes his whiskers with his hand an' says to me:
"Changin' laws an' legislatures ain't, as fur as I can see,
Goin' to make this world much better, unless somehow we can Find a way to make a better an' a finer sort o' man.

"The trouble ain't with statutes or with systems—not at all;
It's with humans jus' like we air an' their petty ways an' small.
We could stop our writin' law-books an' our regulatin' rules
If a better sort of manhood was the product of our schools.
For the things that we air needin' isn't writin' from a pen
Or bigger guns to shoot with, but a bigger type of men.

"I reckon all these problems air jest ornery like the weeds,
They grow in soil that oughta nourish only decent deeds,
An' they waste our time an' fret us when, if we were thinkin' straight
An' livin' right, they wouldn't be so terrible and great.
A good horse needs no snaffle and a good man, I opine,
Doesn't need a law to check him or to force him into line.

"If we ever start in teachin' to our children, year
by year,
How to live with one another, there'll be less o'
trouble here.
If we'd teach 'em how to neighbor an' to walk
in honor's ways,
We could settle every problem which the mind o' man can raise.
What we're needin' isn't systems or some regulatin' plan
But a bigger an' a finer an' a truer type o' man."

The Mothers of the Ministers

The mothers of the ministers, how happy they must be,
For they have realized the dream my mother held for me!
They have the joy they hoped for, have the good for which they've prayed
And the wish that every mother of a baby boy has made.

I never see an acrobat go tumbling through the air,
But what I think some mother's little minister is there.
When Ty Cobb hits a homer and the crowd applauds the "peach",
I wonder if his mother wouldn't rather hear him preach.

Above my little cradle, in the days of long ago,
A great cathedral hovered and the bells swung to and fro,
And every Sunday mother heard the chimes and seemed to see
The worshipers assembling there to listen unto me.

But, oh, I took to writing, for I was a willful lad,
And the minister she dreamed of was a joy she never had;
For my brothers took to business and I choose to serve the Press,
And I robbed my little mother of her dream of happiness.

Yet what if every mother had her fondest dream come true,
And every mother's son should do the work she'd have him do;
The world would teem with ministers, there'd be so many here
You couldn't get a plumber when the faucet's out of gear.

A Bit of Advice

Laugh and take the jest of life, be a man with men,
Give a blow and take a blow and rise to fight again.
But take a tip from one who knows and have it understood—
Yes, get it clearly in your head,
Hang it just above your bed,
Say it when your prayers are said:
"You needn't be a sissy to be good."

Sing and dance and have your fun, but keep this truth in mind:
All the joy that is worth while is of the honest kind.
Get out among the rugged men, do what others do,
Brave the wind and face the rain,
Bend your muscles to the strain,
Have red blood in every vein,
But still stay clean and true.

Never shrink from any task, hear what you must hear,
Take your post whate'er it be, but keep your conscience clear;
Build your manhood firm and strong, stand where men have stood,
Fight whenever you must fight,
Work to win with all your might—
But remember, day and night:
"You needn't be a sissy to be good."

The Things He Didn't Do

He did a lot of clever things,
  Which brought him wealth and fame,
He earned the cheers which conquest brings,
  The public knew his name;
But still they doubted his success
  Who lived with him and knew,
They needed for their happiness
  The things he didn't do.

He never wandered with his boy,
  Or shared a day with him;
He never went for simple joy
  To hunt or fish or swim;
Severe and stern he went his way,
  And never seemed to guess
That they were hungering day by day
  To share his happiness.

They missed him from their home at night
  And longed to see him there,
But fame and fortune held him tight
  And called him from his chair;

And though they gloried in his deeds,
They sadly came to find
That even earthly greatness needs
The simple things and kind.

Success is more than pomp or skill,
And more than worldly fame,
'Tis not enough to climb the hill,
Or win the passing game;
And who would come to happiness
Where love and peace are known,
Must learn that none achieves success
By cleverness alone.

The Violets

Away from all the paths of men,
Deep hidden in the tangled glen,
I found, to lighten up the gloom,
A clump of violets in bloom.
Violets as perfect and as true
As those the florist sells to you,
Violets as brave as those which grow
Where people daily come and go;
And, catching their sweetness on the air,
I wondered why God set them there.

Why in this tangled place away
Should God bid violets to stay?
Men very seldom journey here,
The spot is ugly and severe,
And far from all the praise which makes
Man glory in the pains he takes.
Would mortal strive his best to be
If never mortal smiled to see
His brave achievement? No, a flower
Is quickened by the sun's warm power.

Yet here are violets growing on,
Asking not praise from anyone,
Making this dismal corner bright,
Though hid away from human sight;
Perhaps believing one like me

Some day by chance may come and see
Their loveliness, and with a smile
Make all their patient toil worth while,
Knowing, however great the cost,
That faithful work is never lost.

Then can I not be just as true
Though men my work may never view?
If violets can be violets, when
God sets them from the haunts of men
And bids them blossom there alone,
Unseen, unpraised, unloved, unknown,
Can I not be a man, although
A humble post is mine to know?
Need I, though little praise I gain,
Fancy that I have lived in vain?

The Butterfly Discusses Evolution

"In a very recent age,"
Said a wise and serious sage
To a butterfly with wings of golden flame,
"You were not so fair to see,
You've a horrid ancestry,
From a crawling caterpillar stock you came.

"Now you proudly spread your wings
And you feed on dainty things,
You are beautiful to look at, but I shrug
My shoulders with disdain,
When I think how very plain
You must have been when you were but a slug."

Said the butterfly: "I know
In some distant long ago
As a caterpillar crawling on my way,
I was lowly as could be,
But what is that to you or me?
I am certainly a butterfly to-day!

"As a caterpillar slow
I could never guess or know
What my purpose was while crawling on the bough;
But I stretch my wings and fly,
And you surely can't deny
That I am a lovely butterfly right now!"

It isn't the money you're making, it isn't the clothes
you wear,
And it isn't the skill of your good right hand which makes folks really care.
It's the smile on your face and the light of your eye and the burdens that you bear.

Most any old man can tell you, most any old man
at all,
Who has lived through all sorts of weather, winter
and summer and fall,
That riches and fame are shadows that dance on the garden wall.

It's how do you live and neighbor, how do you work
and play,
It's how do you say "good morning" to the people
along the way,
And it's how do you face your troubles whenever your skies are gray.

It's you, from the dawn to nighttime; you when the day is fair,
You when the storm is raging—how do you face despair?
It is you that the world discovers, whatever the clothes you wear.

You to the end of the journey, kindly and brave and true,
The best and the worst of you gleaming in all
that you say and do,
And the thing that counts isn't money, or glory or power, but you!

The Song of Enough

I'm getting along, with a bit of a song
And a bit of a smile for my neighbor.
I've managed to grin, with the little I win
Day by day as the bit from my labor.
Time was in the past I stood often aghast
As the storms of despair swept around me,
But my ship, although small, bravely weathered them all
And nothing I've dreaded has downed me.

I've not had the luck which some others have struck,
I've neither been famous nor wealthy,
But I've always had meat when I wanted to eat
And I thank the good Lord I've been healthy.
Some things I have missed on the millionaire's list,
But the friends I have made have been true ones;
I have always had suits, shirts and neckties and boots,
Though I couldn't afford many new ones.

I'm getting along, just as one of the throng,
Day by day I have worked for my money,
But in spite of the care and the burdens I bear
I've supped of life's nectar and honey.

My house isn't large, but love has it in charge
And in peace and contentment I dwell there,
And all men I defy, to be happier than I
When a friend puts his hand to the bell there.

I'm getting along with a bit of a song
For I've learned what I knew not at twenty,
That enough for each day, with a bit put away
For the cares of my old age, is plenty.
I have eaten and slept, and at times I have wept,
I've done all that the Lord lets a man do;
I've made friends on the way, and I venture to say
That is all that the richest man can do.

Sermons We See

I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day;
I'd rather one should walk with me than merely tell the way.
The eye's a better pupil and more willing than the ear,
Fine counsel is confusing, but example's always clear;
And the best of all the preachers are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put in action is what everybody needs.

I soon can learn to do it if you'll let me see it done;
I can watch your hands in action, but your tongue too fast may run.
And the lecture you deliver may be very wise and true,
But I'd rather get my lessons by observing what you do;
For I might misunderstand you and the high advice you give,
But there's no misunderstanding how you act and how you live.

When I see a deed of kindness, I am eager to be kind.
When a weaker brother stumbles and a strong man stays behind
Just to see if he can help him, then the wish grows strong in me
To become as big and thoughtful as I know that friend to be.
And all travelers can witness that the best of guides to-day
Is not the one who tells them, but the one who shows the way.

One good man teaches many, men believe what they behold;
One deed of kindness noticed is worth forty that are told.
Who stands with men of honor learns to hold his honor dear,
For right living speaks a language which to every one is clear.
Though an able speaker charms me with his eloquence, I say,
I'd rather see a sermon than to hear one, any day.

Gettin' Old

Gettin' old's not hard, I say,
If it's done the proper way;
When you're findin' out how much
Joy is in the common touch,
Learnin' from experience
An' the book o' common sense
That a man, whoe'er he be,
Richly dressed or poor to see,
Really's tryin' hard to do
Just about the same as you;
When you've found the worth o' gold,
Then you're glad you're gettin' old.

When you've come along the years,
With their smiles an' bitter tears,
An' have seen through clearer eyes
Many things you used to prize
Lose their value, an' you know
Much you didn't long ago;
When you've learned that creed an' birth
Are not real stamps of worth,
An' you've scraped through the veneer
Of the sham an' pomp down here
To the truth you want to hold,
Then you're glad you're gettin' old.

When you've come at last to find
Joy is born of bein' kind;
When you've learned to disbelieve
Tales which make another grieve
An' to them you shut your ear;
When you are not quick to sneer
An' have turned from selfish strife
To the gentler ways o' life,
In your wisdom findin' out
Things you never dreamed about
In your youthful days an' bold—
Then you're glad you're gettin' old.

Gettin' old's not hard, I say,
If it's done the proper way.
Youth is mad with haste an' blind
To the peace which old men find;
But when you have traveled far,
Come to know men as they are;
When you've learned through hurts and aches
All the errors hot youth makes,
An' have found the lasting worth
Of the simpler joys of earth;
When life's purposes unfold,
Then you're glad you're gettin' old.

Fishing

Who taught the willows how to bend
So gracefully to kiss the stream?
What power to-day contrives to send
The sunshine where the birches gleam?
Who taught the song birds how to sing
Those melodies of rich delight?
Where are those small clouds wandering?
Hello! I thought I felt a bite!

Look at the dogwoods over there!
No mortal mind created them!
God's magic glistens everywhere!
That bulrush has a sturdy stem,
What purpose does it serve, and why
Those water lilies gleaming white?
There's life in land and sea and sky!
Great Scott! I've had another bite!

Men build with brick and steel and stone
And soon their labor disappears,
But there's an elm tree fully grown,
And it's been there for years and years.

In town I seldom think of God,
  But here I feel that He's in sight
And very close, and that seems odd—
  Hello! That felt just like a bite!

Fishing's a curious game! The stream,
  The sky, the song birds and the breeze
Conspire to make the angler dream,
  There is a charm in all he sees;
That stuff I learned in Sunday school,
  Out here I am convinced it's right,
Who doubts God's love must be a fool!
  Quit dreaming now! You've got a bite!

Fellowship

The earth is warmed by the kindly sun,
But lives are warmed by the deeds of men
And their words of praise when our best we've done
And the parting wish that we'll meet again.

The clouds may blanket the sky with gray
And the earth grow chill as the rain descends,
But he shall keep smiling along his way
Whose heart is warmed by the love of friends.

It's the glad "hello" and the handclasp true,
The smile of joy on a friendly face,
That means contentment for me and you
And makes of the earth a happy place.

It isn't the gold that we strive to earn,
Nor the fame we struggle so long to win,
For these are glories we'd quickly spurn
If never a kind heart took us in.

The poorest man on this earth is he
Who has bartered his friendships for selfish gain,
Who has sought advantage by trickery
And seeks for a welcoming smile in vain.

For the earth is warmed by a higher plan,
And he shall be glad when his work is done
Who has kept the faith with his fellow man,
And the peace of his own conscience won.

Beauty

The beauty of a lily and the beauty of a face
Make bright a gloomy corner and exalt the common place;
But there's nothing shines so brightly in this world of human need,
As the beauty and glory of a kind and thoughtful deed.

There are lovely things to look at—there's the blue sky and the sun
And the hilltops in the distance, and the works that men have done,
And the best of God's creations, in this world of joy and smart,
And the helping hand of service and the big and generous heart.

Not on canvas or in marble, or in flowers which bloom to fade,
Or in lovely skies which vanish, are the lasting beauties made;
They make bright the dismal places, but the kind and cheery voice,
And the heart that is unselfish, make the weary to rejoice.

There is beauty in a lily, and there's beauty in the hills,
There is beauty in the blossoms wet with dew the morning spills;
But the richer, lasting beauty which this world forever needs,
Through its days of tribulation, is the beauty of our deeds.

When my hair is thin and silvered, an' my time of toil is through,
When I've many years behind me, an' ahead of me a few,
I shall want to sit, I reckon, sort of dreamin'
in the sun,
An' recall the roads I've traveled an' the many things I've done.
An' I hope there'll be no picture that I'll hate to look upon
When the time to paint it better or to wipe it out is gone.

I hope there'll be no vision of a hasty word I've said
That has left a trail of sorrow, like a whip welt, sore an' red;
An' I hope my old age dreamin' will bring back no bitter scene
Of a time when I was selfish an' a time when I was mean;
When I'm gettin' old an' feeble, an' I'm far along life's way
I don't want to sit regrettin' any by-gone yesterday.

I'll admit the children boss me, I'll admit I often smile
When I ought to frown upon 'em, but for such a little while
They are naughty, romping youngsters, that I have no heart to scold,
Age to me would be a torment an' a ghost-infested night
If I'd ever hurt a baby, an' I could not make it right.

I am painting now the picture that I'll some day want to see,
I am filling in a canvas that will come back soon to me.
An' though nothing great is on it, an' though nothing there is fine,
I shall want to look it over when I'm old, an' call it mine.
An' I do not dare to leave it, while the paint is warm an' wet,
With a single thing upon it that I'll later on regret.

Tulips

Bulbs I planted in the fall,
Covered them, and that was all;
Bitter blew the wind that day
As I smoothed the bed of clay,
But I whispered: "In the spring
This will be a lovely thing."

Then the winter came and frowned
On that little patch of ground,
Covered it with ice and snow,
Uglier it seemed to grow;
Bleak and desolate and bare
As if death itself were there.

Now the sunbeams come to toil
Busily above my soil,
And with sculptor's blows precise
Now they chip away the ice,
Melt with torch the frost and snow
So that every bulb may grow.

Through the black earth I can see
Beauty coming back to me,
Life in blossom shall unfold,
Red and pink and yellow gold!
Thus my tulips in the spring
Prove the faith to which I cling.

Why Fathers Boast

Little girl, just half past two,
With those laughing eyes of blue
And that smirk of mirth and gladness,
And that flash of mischief, too;
Can you tell just what your dad is Thinking of, and just how glad is
That old heart of his this minute
To be looking down on you?

Other little girls have eyes
Just as sparkling with surprise,
There are countless other babies
Just as mischievous and wise;
But to me, I swear 'tis true,
Not another one would do,
There's no baby in this wide world
Quite so wonderful as you!

You have something, I suppose,
Not another baby knows,
I could pick you from ten millions
By the wrinkles on your toes;
By that something extra fine,
I should say almost divine,
By that radiant lovely spirit
I should know that you were mine.

Little girl, just half past two,
Though I boast the charms of you,
That is something ever other
Doting daddy here will do;
Just as I fill up with pride,
Every daddy, far and wide,
With the baby God has sent him,
Is supremely satisfied.

So I'm telling this to you,
Little girl, just half past two,
That you'll not grow over boastful
Of the foolish things I do;
North and south, and east and west,
By this fancy we're possessed.
Every dad, the world wide over,
Thinks his babe the very best.

The Faith of the Traveling Man

Since I've been a bit of a traveling man
My heart goes out to the drummer clan,
For I've learned a lot which I didn't know
In my younger days, as I watched them go,
When I envied them and their chance to ride
Over the country and far and wide.
But I've lost the lure of the leather grip,
And I live in dread of another trip,
And I've shaped my life to a different plan,
For I haven't the faith of a traveling man!

I haven't that faith which can keep me strong
When I'm outward bound and the miles are long,
I can laugh and jest till the day is through,
But I can't keep up on a letter or two.
I long for the sight of a tousled head
And a healthy boy on his little bed;
In spite of the news which their mother writes,
I haven't that faith for the lonely nights.
I frequently doubt what the letters tell
And I long to see them to know they're well!

But a traveling man must travel along
Whether matters at home are right or wrong.
He cannot go to their rooms at night
And see for himself that they are all right,
He must live by faith at the long day's close!
He must think them well, but he never knows!
He must cure himself when his thoughts grow black,
And that is the sort of faith I lack.
"Don't worry! We're well!" she may write to me,
But I've got to be with them where I can see.

The Package of Seeds

I paid a dime for a package of seeds
And the clerk tossed them out with a flip.
"We've got 'em assorted for every man's needs,"
He said with a smile on his lip,
"Pansies and poppies and asters and peas!
Ten cents a package! And pick as you please!"

Now seeds are just dimes to the man in the store,
And the dimes are the things that he needs;
And I've been to buy them in seasons before,
But have thought of them merely as seeds;
But it flashed through my mind as I took them this time,
"You have purchased a miracle here for a dime!"

"You've a dime's worth of power which no man can create,
You've a dime's worth of life in your hand!
You've a dime's worth of mystery, destiny, fate,
Which the wisest cannot understand.
In this bright little package, now isn't it odd?
You've a dime's worth of something known only to God!"

These are seeds, but the plants and the blossoms are here
With their petals of various hues;
In these little pellets, so dry and so queer,
There is power which no chemist can fuse.
Here is one of God's miracles soon to unfold,
Thus for ten cents an ounce is Divinity sold!

Kirby, the Rose Lover

I've been down to Kirby, down to Kirby and his roses,
And his peonies and pansies and his countless stock of posies,
And he never mentioned dollars, never talked about his neighbors,
Never spoke a word of scandal or the hardship of his labors.
But he led me through his gardens and, his eyes with kindness glowing,
Like a father to his children, talked of living things and growing.

We spent the day with blossoms, stood about and talked them over,
Saw the orchards pink with beauty, and the meadows white with clover.
And he taught me little secrets of the peonies and roses,
As one mother to another all that she has learned discloses,

Taught me how and when to plant them, how to know wild shoots from true ones,
What to cherish of the old ones, what is worthy of the new ones.

Oh, I don't know how to tell it, but I felt my soul
expanding,
Felt my vision growing wider as with Kirby I was standing,
And I thought my little garden could be lovelier and brighter,
That my roses might grow redder and my peonies grow whiter,
And my life a little finer if I recognized my duty
And thought less of selfish profit and a little more of beauty.

A Summer Day

Blue in the sky and green in the tree
And a bird singing anthems of gladness for me,
  A breeze soft and fair
  As a little girl's hair,
With nothing that's ugly or base anywhere;
  A world that's swept clean
  Of the doubtful and mean,
With nowhere a hint of the care that has been.

I stand at my gate with the sun in my face,
And I thank the good Lord for such beauty and grace.
  Time was, I declare
  When the snows drifted there,
And those boughs with their blossoms were ugly and bare.
  Now the sin and the wrong
  Of the cold days and long
Are lost in life's splendor of sunshine and song.

God makes it all right in good time, I believe,
We doubt when we're troubled, we doubt when we grieve;

Like a stark, barren tree
Looms the wrong which we see.
Hurt, anguish and care hide the splendor to be,
But at last from the pain
Rises beauty again,
And there's never a bough that has suffered in vain.

Perhaps at the last, 'neath a lovelier sun,
When the anguish and hurt of life's growing is done,
We may rise from our pain
Showing never a stain
Of the cares of the years which fell on us like rain;
When the soul is set free
All the flaws we now see
May be lost in the joy of the new life to be.

Grace at Evening

For all the beauties of the day,
The innocence of childhood's play,
For health and strength and laughter sweet,
Dear Lord, our thanks we now repeat.

For this our daily gift of food
We offer now our gratitude,
For all the blessings we have known
Our debt of gratefulness we own.

Here at the table now we pray,
Keep us together down the way;
May this, our family circle, be Held fast by love and unity.

Grant, when the shades of night shall fall,
Sweet be the dreams of one and all;
And when another day shall break
Unto Thy service may we wake.

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

Page

A little laughter, and a time for tears..... 20
Argue it pro and con as you will.....114
Away from all the paths of men.....156

Because it rains when we wish it wouldn't.... 66
Bill is a philosopher.....104
Blue in the sky and green in the tree.....183
Bulbs I planted in the fall.....174
By the blue that bends above us..... 91

Dear Lord, accept our humble prayer.....117

For all the beauties of the day.....185
From dawn to dusk is not so long..... 89

Gettin' old's not hard, I say.....165
Give me to look at life and be..... 65
God bless this house and all within it.....144
God won't ask if you were clever..... 53
Grant me the strength from day to day.....139
Grant me to close the day without regret..... 23

He came in as a salesman.....121
He did a lot of clever things.....154
He risked for much..... 19
Hold fast and falter not..... 74

I believe in friendship, and I believe in trees.. 63
I cheated a good friend yesterday..... 35
I could not utter it last night.....115
I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day.163

Page

If all the days were fair....118
If he will add one touch of grace....135
If they give a job to you....123
I'm getting along, with a bit of a song....161
"I'm going to send you down to earth".... 71
I must be strict with me!....130
"In a very recent age"....158
I paid a dime for a package of seeds....179
I think that I would rather see....125
It is all in vain to preach of the truth.... 67
It isn't the money you're making....159
"It's a friendly world"....108
It's the friends who come to call.... 31
I've been down to Kirby....181
I want to come to autumn with the silver in my hair.... 57
I would not shirk the task.... 32

Just a little sunshine.... 93

Laugh and take the jest of life....153
Let me go through the day.... 45
Let me grow taller with the years.... 68
Let me not walk the way....147
Life has laughter in it....101
Life is a mystery, all of man's history.... 86
Little girl, just half past two....175
Lord, I may fail to reach the heights of fame.. 92
Lord, let me do my little part.... 69
Lord, let me stand in the thick of the fight.... 79
Lord, make me strong enough to bear.... 51
Lord, make me tolerant and wise.... 27

My boy, be easy with your friend....105

Not great but neighborly I'd be 99
"Now"—said a good book unto me.... 87

Page

Often as we watched her there.....126
O lad o' mine.....120
Old Man Green, you've never heard of..... 29

Peace, unto this house, I pray..... 60
Poor is the man who counts this life.....145

Since I've been a bit of a traveling man.....177
Since laughter comes and laughter goes..... 46
Some things there are I must not do..... 97
Stone-throwers, is there no wrong you have done?.....110
Sunshine and shadow and laughter and tears.. 55
Suppose, for a minute, you stumbled and fell..107
Suppose the Lord should say to me.....111

That man is great, whatever be his labor..... 58
The beauty of a lily and the beauty of a face..170
The dreamer sees the finished thing..... 47
The earth is warmed by the kindly sun.....169
The Lord must have liked us, I say when I see. 73
The mothers of ministers, how happy they must be.....151
The non-believer is a man..... 80
There's hope in a place, however dark..... 37
These things you'll need to see you through..141
The sky's a sea of blue to-day..... 17
They're waiting for us over there..... 24
They taught him how to come to skill..... 41
Think of yourself from first to last..... 52
This day is mine to mar or make..... 16
This I'll say for men I know..... 59
This is all the world will ask.....137
This I should like to be..... 98
This I would like to be—braver and bolder...143
This much I know: God does not wrong us here.113

Page

This much I know: ill-gotten gain..... 36
This said the whispering oak..... 21
Time was when a king of olden days..... 75
To-day I saw the sun come up..... 77
Trouble is laughter as soon as it's done..... 39
Turn to the future, boy! There wait.....131

We're brothers all, whate'er the place..... 38
We were sittin' there, and smokin' of our pipes.149
What comfort have I now to give.....128
"What did you gather of worth and pride?".. 81
What glorious news they'd have to tell..... 95
What is manhood, boasted much..... 61
"What shall I give him now?" said God..... 26
When I shall run my fortune through..... 88
When man has done his level best.....103
When my hair is thin and silvered.....172
When the blow fell and his hopes went out... 85
When the burden grows heavy..... 49
When the dark days come and the clouds grow gray..... 15
Who taught the willows how to bend.....167
With argument we spent the night..... 83

You are the fellow that has to decide.....133
You do not need a score of men to laugh and sing with you..... 43
You'll never get to glory, lad..... 33

PART TWO

HARBOR LIGHTS OF HOME

Harbor Lights of Home

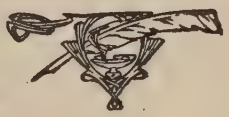
By

Edgar A. Guest



The Reilly & Lee Co.
Chicago

COPYRIGHT, MCMXXVIII
BY
THE REILLY & LEE CO.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

PRINTED IN U. S. A.

Dedicated

To the best friends, the best neighbors,
the best citizens in the world—the home folks!

Harbor Lights of Home

A minister hath given you
The name you'll wear for aye.
I wish he could have shriven you
And washed your faults away.

E. A. G.

INDEX

Poem	Page
Age	22
At Pinehurst	157
At the Journey's End	175
Aunt Jane Worried	92
Bad Golfer Who Was Good, The	65
Battered Dream Ship, The	109
Beneath the Stars	112
Best Land, The	33
Bird Nests	149
Bombing Squad Flies Over, A	182
Bride and Groom	85
Candy-Man, The	107
Canterbury Bells	150
Checking the Day	79
Children Know, The	185
City Home, The	181
Common Dog, The	161
Contentment	21
Counting the Babies	141
Cynic, The	127
Dead Oak Tree, The	32
Death, the Collector	125
Dreams	97
Dub Golfer, The	116
Enriched	50
Equipment	91
Fate Talks About Men	87
Father Gives His Version	29
Few New Teeth, A	83
Fine Arts, The	121

Poem	Page
First Easter, The	71
First Watch, The	47
Fisherman's Luck	86
Flag, The	137
Fool, The	131
For Fish and Birds	74
Friend, A	134
Future, The	143
Gardeners	119
Gentle Man, The	93
Giant Stories	99
Grace	96
Grandpa's Walking Stick	17
Had Youth Been Willing to Listen	106
Hard Job, The	101
Her Awful Brother	129
Hint, A	115
His Philosophy	63
Home, The	173
Home Town, The	111
Honest People	70
Horn Honker, The	133
"I Didn't Think and I Forgot"	98
If To Be Clever	95
I Go Back Twenty Years	25
I Make An Experiment	177
Individuality	117
Inn-Keeper Makes Excuses, The	23
In the Garden	18
Intimate Tale, An	153
In Time of Trial	147
Journey, The	26
Joy of Getting Home, The	57
Keys to the Car, The	39
Kidnaped by a Dream	155

Poem	Page
Life on the Earth	164
Life's Needs	102
Lights of Home, The	15
Like Calls to Like	37
Marbles and Money	43
Memorial Day	176
Men of Science	144
Merit and the Throng	77
Mind, The	67
Missing Man, The	73
Modern Barber, The	41
Modern Clothesline, The	179
Mother Finds Rest, A	145
Mother Tells Her Story, The	27
My Aunt's Bonnet	55
My Life	75
New Car, The	64
Night	163
No Honey-Gatherer	89
Old Hat, The	49
Old Prospector Talks, The	44
Old Sailor Talks, The	90
On Church Building	82
Organist, The	124
Our House	69
Perils of a Public Speaker	113
Pixley Folks	19
Plea, A	53
Possession	122
Prayer, A	31
Prayer for a Little Girl	140
Question of Sight, A	158

Poem	Page
Said the Carpenter to Me	61
Salesman Gets a Shock, The	36
Sea-Dreams	103
Sentiment	54
She Wouldn't Go to Bed	59
Singing Bird, The	132
Study the Rules	108
Style	118
Success	180
Summer	126
Summer Day, A	58
Team Work	105
Then and Now	167
Theory and Practice	170
Time	165
To a Little Girl	151
To the June Bride	171
Tragedies of Innocence, The	104
Twilight	169
Two Worlds	81
Unchanged	160
Up and Down the Lanes of Love	45
Waster, The	78
What a Man Likes	35
Who Builds a House	148
Who Gets the Watch and Chain	128
Wild Flowers, The	174
Wise, The	123
Worst of Pests, The	183
Young Doctor, The	135
Younger Generation, The	139
Youth and the World	51

The Lights of Home

Much I've done and much I've seen,
To many places I have been,
But to me there's no delight
Like the lights of home at night.
Porch globe twinkling from afar,
Window lights which softer are,
Shining through the inky gloom
From a peaceful, happy room.

I've seen lights on ships at sea,
Lights that flash incessantly,
Beacon lamps, and those that shine
In some merchant's costly sign,
But my pulses faster beat
As I turn a little street
And I see the lights of home
Twinkling at me through the gloam.

Rest is here, they seem to say,
Peace is here to close the day,
Love is waiting to embrace
You within this little place,

Hurry faster! Hurry in!
Where there's neither hate nor sin
Nor the cruelty and care
Of the greedy world out there.

Hurry in and sit you down,
And forget the noisy town.
Shut the door and put away
All the burdens of the day.
Come, let loved ones stroke your cheek,
Let them laugh to hear you speak,
Here all selfish bickerings cease,
Here are love and rest and peace.

GRANDPA'S WALKING STICK

My grandpa once was very sick
And now he's got a walking stick,
Coz one of his legs, as he says to me,
Isn't quite so good as it used to be;
And he can't run and he daresen't kick
Coz he'd fall if he hadn't his walking stick.

When my grandpa comes to our house to stay
I like to carry his stick away,
And put it in places where he can't see,
Then he can't get up to come after me.
And he shouts out loud: "Hey! Everyone!
Who knows where my other leg has gone?

"I had it here by my chair and now
It's disappeared from its place somehow.
I'll bet this little Miss Mischief here
Knows something about it, she looks so queer.
Was it you, who carried my leg away?"
"Maybe 'twas eat by a bear," I say.

Then he can't get up and he can't move round
Till I come and tell him his leg is found.
The bear didn't swallow it after all,
He must have got frightened and let it fall.
Then my grandpa laughs till his sides are sore,
And we hippety-hop to the candy store.

I sometimes get weary of people, and weary of being polite;
I sometimes grow tired of the dull man, and sometimes am bored by the bright.
And then when my nerves are a-tingle I walk in the yard that is ours,
And I thank the good Lord for the comfort of songsbirds and blue skies and flowers.

I never grow tired of the martens which circle about overhead;
I never grow weary of robins—there is nothing about them I dread.
I smile when I see them returning, I sigh when at last they depart,
And perhaps it's because they are never vindictive, or petty, or smart.

And the trees don't expect to be talked to. I can lie there and dream in the shade,
And not have to think up an answer to some dreary question that's made.
So I often slip into my garden when I'm weary of hearing things said,
And thank the good Lord for my roses and trees and the birds overhead.

Sometimes I git to thinkin' o' the days o' youth, an' then
Therc comes a-troopin' through my mind th' wimmin folk an' men
I used ter know in Pixley, an' I sit with 'em awhile,
A-livin' all th' fun we knew before we put on style:
A-dancin' all th' dances, th' lancers an' q'drilles,
A-goin' to th' huskin' bees an' picnics on th' hills;
An' I quite ferget I'm livin' on a crowded city street,
Where I don't know a quarter of th' people that I meet.

I settle in my arm chair, an' I light my meerschaum pipe,
An' then I'm back in Pixley with the apples red an' ripe.
I'm makin' eyes at Agnes, which is wrong I must allow,
Coz she was married long ago an' has four babies now.
An' I'm pokin' fun at Lydy, who was in for any joke,
But she has married wealthy—still out yonder in th' smoke
She is still the laughin' lassie, free from all the haughty airs
That wimmin folk think needful when they marry millionaires.

Then I steal a kiss from Nellie, an' I hear her say
"No, no!"
Th' way she did a thousand times, but never meant it, though.
An' again from church we're comin', and th' hour is gettin' late
An' we stand awhile a-gabbin', she a-swingin' on th' gate,
A-tellin' of her uncles an' her aunts, an' how they were,
While all that I was wantin' was to stay an' talk of her.
An' again I'm gettin' ready jes' to ask her to be mine,
An' again she ups an' leaves me, sayin' "Ed, it's after nine."
O, I tell you what! It's funny, when I think about it all,
An' I kinder get to broodin' an' th' old days I recall
When there warn't no automobiles, warn't no problem plays an' such,
When th' only fault with young folks was they loved
t' play too much;
When there warn't no style about us, one warn't richer than another,
When we didn't think of money, never snubbed a poorer brother;
An' to see 'em now with riches, an' ashamed to even say
That they ever lived in Pixley—Why, my soul is there to-day!

CONTENTMENT

Money and fame and health alone
Are not enough for a man to own;
For healthy men are heard to sigh
And men of wealth go frowning by,
And one with fame may play his part
With a troubled mind and a heavy heart.
If these three treasures no joy possess,
How shall a man find happiness?

Health comes first in the famous three,
But cripples can smile, as we all must see;
Fame is sweet, as we all must own,
But the happiest hearts are not widely known.
Money is good, when it's truly earned,
But peace with fortune is not concerned,
For the bravest and loveliest souls we know
Have little of silver and gold to show.

Yet there must be a way to the goal we seek,
A path to peace for the strong and weak,
And it must be open for all to fare,
In spite of life's sorrows and days of care.
For those who have suffered the most the while
Look out on the world with the tenderest smile,
And those who have little of wealth to boast
Are often the ones that we love the most.

So I fancy the joy which men strive to win
Is born of something which lies within,
A strain of courage no care can break,
A love for beauty no thief can take—
For they are the happiest souls of earth
Who gather the treasures of gentle worth—
The pride of neighbors, the faith of friends
And a mind at peace when the sun descends.

AGE

How strange is age, that season of decay
  Which all men dread yet strongly hope to gain,
  And all men wish their loved ones to attain.
We pity those whose strength has slipped away.
The tired old people, done with work and play,
  Once more as children, keep the window pane
  And watch the world's swift moving human train
Bearing the freightage of the busy day.

Not to grow old, in youth a man must die.
  The price of age is fading sound and sight
And wrinkled foreheads and the sitting by
  While younger hearts press forward in the fight.
We know that age puts out ambition's fire,
Yet to grow old is every man's desire.

THE INN-KEEPER MAKES EXCUSES

"Oh, if only I had known!"
  Said the keeper of the inn.
"But no hint to me was shown,
  And I didn't let them in.

"Yes, a star gleamed overhead,
  But I couldn't read the skies,
And I'd given every bed
  To the very rich and wise.

"And she was so poorly clad,
  And he hadn't much to say!
But no room for them I had,
  So I ordered them away.

"She seemed tired, and it was late
  And they begged so hard, that I
Feeling sorry for her state,
  In the stable let them lie.

"Had I turned some rich man out
  Just to make a place for them,
'Twould have killed, beyond a doubt,
  All my trade at Bethlehem.

"Then there came the wise men three
To the stable, with the morn,
Who announced they'd come to see
The great King who had been born.

"And they brought Him gifts of myrrh,
Costly frankincense and gold,
And a great light shone on her
In the stable, bleak and cold.

"All my patrons now are dead
And forgotten, but to-day
All the world to peace is led
By the ones I sent away.

"It was my unlucky fate
To be born that Inn to own,
Against Christ I shut my gate—
Oh, if only I had known!"

I GO BACK TWENTY YEARS

I'm just an old fool, twenty years we've been wed,
And the craziest notion came into my head,
I remembered the way I'd made love to her then,
And I thought to myself I'll just try it again.
I'll court her once more in my old foolish way,
Just to see how she'll act and to hear what she'll say.

So I bought her some roses, a few in a box,
Just by way of commencing my series of shocks,
And all through the supper I looked at her so,
With that sad pensive look which all young lovers know,
And I patted her hand and kept calling her "dear,"
And she said to the children: "Your father is queer!"

I kissed her and rumpled her silver-tinged hair,
Rubbed my beard on her cheek, and she seemed not to care.
I said: "You are lovely! This wide world around
I am sure that your equal could never be found."
I praised the long lash on her eye's lovely lid,
Thinking she wouldn't like all that gush—but she did!

THE JOURNEY

From birth to death the pathway leads
'Neath changing skies of blue and gray.
How far the journey none can say,
At Heaven's gate meet all the creeds.

For some the road is long and straight.
For some the way is rough and steep.
But all must work and all must weep
And all must come to Heaven's gate.

Then why for words should friends divide?
And why should comrades change to foes,
Disputing what no mortal knows?
Why make of forms the things of pride?

The same port waits the great and low.
For all the journey is the same,
And who shall say that praise or blame
Shall come from what we couldn't know?

He wisest lives who trusts the plan
By which he treads the ways of earth,
Who gives himself to deeds of worth
And brothers with his fellow man.

THE MOTHER TELLS HER STORY

When first I met your father, it was at a wedding, dears,
And he wore a high white collar which stretched up to his ears,
He was thin and short and nervous, and his dress suit didn't fit,
And I didn't like the way he dressed his hair a little bit.
It was parted in the middle and it lopped across his brow—
And I never dreamed that evening I'd be married to him now.

I knew a dozen fellows who were handsomer than he,
And all of them were richer, and they thought a lot of me;
They brought me flowers and candy each time they came to call—
So this meeting with your father didn't mean much after all.
And besides his ways annoyed me—I'd have told him if I dared
That I didn't like his manner and the vulgar ways he stared.

Well, next Sunday after dinner he came up to call on me
And stayed so long that Grandma then invited him for tea.
After that he came so often that your Grandpa used to say:
"That skinny gawk is driving all the healthy stock away!"
But somehow I'd grown to like him, and I marveled that I could,
For he never tried to kiss me—though I often wished
he would.

Now that's all there is to tell you—by next June I was his bride,
But before that I had made him part his hair upon the side,
And I'd made him change his collars, and I'd slicked him up a lot—
For I taught him what he should do, and the things which he should not.
But don't tell him that I've told you. That's the way I met your dad.
Would I do the same thing over? Well, he hasn't been so bad!

FATHER GIVES HIS VERSION

Well, you see, I met your mother at a wedding, long ago,
And though I was four-and-twenty, up to then I didn't know
That in all our busy city, which I'd traveled up and down,
There was such a lovely creature, with such lustrous eyes of brown.
But the minute that I saw her I just stared and stared and stared,
And right then I would have hugged her and kissed her—if I'd dared!

She was acting as the bridesmaid, I was best man for the groom,
And of course the bride was lovely, but the loveliest in the room
Wasn't just then getting married—'twas my thought as I stood there—
For I couldn't keep from staring at your mother, I declare,
And I couldn't keep from thinking, as we knelt there, side by side,
There must be another wedding, and then she must be my bride.

Well, the wedding party scattered, bride and groom and guests and all,
But I asked that lovely bridesmaid if she'd let me
come to call.
Well, she blushed and gave permission, and when Sunday evening came
I bought a box of candy, with a very famous name,
And I went up there to see her, and her Pa and Ma
were there,
And I wanted so to kiss her—but of course I didn't dare.

Now that's how I met your mother—and 'twas twenty years ago,
And there was another wedding—just the one I'd longed to know,
For one lovely Sunday evening, when I went up
there to call,
I caught her up and kissed her, as we lingered in the hall,
And we planned right then to marry—it was love that made me bold—
Now that's how I met your mother—but don't tell her that I told.

A PRAYER

Grant me, O Lord, this day to see
The need this world may have for me;
To play the friend
Unto the end;
To bear my burden and to keep
My courage, though the way be steep.

Grant me, O Lord, to set aside
The petty things of selfish pride;
To toil without
Too much of doubt;
To meet what comes of good or ill
And be a gracious neighbor, still.

Grant me, O Lord, to face the rain
And not too bitterly complain;
Nor let a joy
My calm destroy;
But teach me so to live that I
Can brother with each passer-by.

THE DEAD OAK TREE

An oak tree died the other day
  Despite my constant care;
Now men must carry it away
  And leave my garden bare.

It came to leaf in early spring.
  To live 'twas guaranteed;
Man is so vain and proud a thing,
  He vaunted God, indeed.

For how can mortal guarantee
  The breath of life, and say
That he can keep within a tree
  What God may take away?

It cannot be that man can sense,
  As do the sun and rain,
What living trees experience
  Of loneliness and pain.

I think they never heard it sigh,
  Nor ever dreamed a tree
Could, broken-hearted, pine and die,
  Who wrote that guarantee.

THE BEST LAND

If I knew a better land on this glorious world of ours,
Where a man gets bigger money and is working shorter hours;
If the Briton or the Frenchman had an easier life than mine,
I'd pack my goods this minute and I'd sail across the brine.
But I notice when an alien wants a land of hope and cheer,
And a future for his children, he comes out and settles here.

Here's the glorious land of Freedom. Here's the milk and honey goal
For the peasant out of Russia, for the long subjected Pole.
It is here the sons of Italy and men of Austria turn
For the comfort of their bodies and the money they can earn.
And with all that men complain of, and all that goes amiss,
There's no happier, better nation on the world's broad face than this.

So I'm thinking when I listen to the wails of discontent,
And some foreign disbeliever spreads his evil sentiment,
That the breed of hate and envy that is sowing sin and shame
In this glorious land of Freedom should go back from whence it came.
And I hold it is the duty, rich or poor, of every man
Who enjoys this country's bounty, to be ALL American.

WHAT A MAN LIKES

This is what a man likes: a blue sky and a stream,
The lily pads off yonder and the shore with gold
agleam,
The west wind gently blowing for then the fishing's sure—
A friend to share the glory and a bass to take the lure.

This is what a man likes: a day away from things,
A day where dreams are golden and malice never stings,
A friend to read his heart to, who'll keep the tale secure,
A reel that's running freely and a bass to take the lure.

This is what a man likes: a chance to test his skill,
The hazard of disaster and a struggle's surging thrill,
The joy of honest hunger and hardships to endure,
The gulls to fly above him and a bass to take the lure.

This is what a man likes: a friend to share his boat,
The freedom of the open, an old and shabby coat.
For all the aches of failure, 'tis here he finds a cure—
A haunt God made for fishing, and a bass to take the lure.

THE SALESMAN GETS A SHOCK

The salesman saw his shabby clothes, and eyed him
head to toe;
So rough a looking man, thought he, could not be good to know;
And since he sold expensive cars, which only rich men buy,
To sell the ragged-looking man he did not even try.

The stranger walked among the cars and looked the models o'er,
The youthful salesman passed him by a dozen times
or more;
Not once he paused to talk to him, he scorned the proffered smile,
And looked about for richer men who might be more worth while.

The manager came out at last and saw the shabby man.
His hand went out in welcome as he shouted: "Hello, Dan!"
"Hello, Bill," said the shabby man, "my daughter wants a car
And I've been noseying around to see how good they are!

"Send up the red one over there, she likes to cut a dash,"
And reaching in his wallet he drew out the price in cash.

"My women wear the style for me. You know my ways are quaint.
By gosh," said he, "I think that boy has fallen in a faint!"

They brought the youthful salesman to, and sent him home to rest.
"Don't ever judge a man," said they, "by how he may be dressed.
You lost a good cash customer, but write this lesson down:
'Not all the worthwhile people strut in broadcloth 'round the town.'"

LIKE CALLS TO LIKE

If you walk as a friend you will find a friend wherever you choose to fare,
If you go with mirth to a far strange land you will find that mirth is there.
For the strangest part of this queer old world is that like will join with like,
And who walks with love for his fellowmen an answering love will strike.

Here each of us builds his little world, and chooses its people, too;
Though millions trample the face of earth, each life touches but the few.
And the joy you'll find as you venture forth your fortune or fame to make,
Lies not in some stranger's power to say, for it's all in the joy you take.

If you walk in honor then honest men will meet
you along the way,
But if you be false you will find men false, wherever you chance to stray.
For good breeds good and the bad breeds bad; we are met by the traits we show.
Love will find a friend at the stranger's door where hate would find a foe.

For each of us builds the world he knows, which only himself can spoil,
And an hour of hate or an hour of shame can ruin
a life of toil.
And though to the farthermost ends of earth your duty may bid you fare
If you walk with truth in your heart as a friend,
you will find friends waiting there.

THE KEYS TO THE CAR

The keys to the car! Oh, the keys to the car,
What a terrible, horrible burden they are!
Whenever we travel
The concrete or gravel,
Or visit the neighbors or go as we please,
I start in to fumble
And foolishly mumble
This query: "Oh, what did I do with the keys?"

I go through my pockets like mad on the quest,
I go through my trousers, my coat and my vest—
I've keys for the clock
And the doors that I lock,
I've keys I possess and don't know what they are,
I've keys for the closet,
The safety deposit—
But what did I do with the keys to the car?

I've gloves and I've papers, I've letters and bills
And all of the stuff that a man's pockets fills,
I've matches, a token,
A knife that is broken,

The mangled remains of a ruined cigar,
I've loose paper-clippers
And finger-nail snippers—
But where, yes, oh where, are the keys to the car?

Nell asks: "Are you sure?" and I answer her:
"Madam,
Never mind your suggestions, I tell you I had 'em!
Just look on me pleasantly,
I'll find 'em presently,
They're somewhere about me and cannot be far;
They're here, that's conclusive,
Not lost—just elusive,
Just wait till I find 'em—those keys to the car."

THE MODERN BARBER

The old-time barber used to be a genial sort of cuss;
He gathered up the gossip and he'd give it all to us.
His language wasn't polished, and some epithets he'd use
To strengthen his opinions or to decorate the news.
He'd snip and talk, and talk and snip, and now and then he'd let Us see the ladies' pictures in the old Police Gazette.

The old-time barber didn't need an education vast,
'Twas enough to know the fighters of the present and the past.
And in the baseball season he could get along right well
With the home team's printed schedule and a yarn or two to tell.
Then, as we waited for our turn, we never had to fret,
We could look at all the ladies in the old Police Gazette.

But now the old-time barber and his shop have passed away;
Men no longer talk with freedom when they visit him to-day.

For the women folk are sitting round the room in every chair,
And the modern barber's busy bobbing many a matron's hair.
Now it's "Vogue" and the "Pictorial" his waiting patrons get,
Instead of that old favorite, the pink Police Gazette!

The modern barber's had to learn a line of talk that's new;
The language of the prize ring and the diamond will not do.
Now he snips and chats of fashions, weddings, dinner parties, teas;
And tells 'em who's been in to get their tresses bobbed for these.
There is never talk of prize fight or a horse race or a bet,
For his shop is now a parlor, where there is no Police Gazette.

MARBLES AND MONEY

Ed and John were little boys in the long ago,
Playing marbles day by day, just like boys you know.
Ed was clever, so was John. Ed one difference bore—
Winning marbles when he played made him wish for more.
Heavier grew his little sack, still on winning bent—
Ed had more than he could use, but was not content.

John played marbles now and then, never lost them all;
Had enough to join the game when the boys would call,
Played at baseball, climbed the trees, loved the birds, and knew
Many a thrill of doing things Ed would never do.
Kept his marbles in a sack smaller far than Ed's;
Hadn't more than fifty mibs, blues and whites and reds.

"John," said Ed one day to him, still on marbles bent,
"I've a thousand in my sacks, but I'm not content.
Just how many now have you?" Answered John, "A few.
Fifty marbles, I should say, but I've more than you."

"More than I?" said Ed, surprised, "surely that can't be!"
"Yes," said John, "I've more than you—I've all I want, you see."

Rich man, piling wealth on wealth, catch John's point of view!
Who has all he wants to-day is richer far than you.

THE OLD PROSPECTOR TALKS

Gold is found in the hills, and then
Carried back to the haunts of men.
And two of us came in the early days
To pan the streams for the dirt that pays.

And we stuck it out for a time, till he Got sick of the game which enchanted me.
And he went back to the town one day
To get his gold in an easier way.

He quit these hills and he left me cold
To scramble with men for his bit of gold.
Now some like walls and roofs and rooms,
But I like mountains where thunder booms,

And skies and trees and the open plains
Where a man must work for the bit he gains.

So I've stayed right here and I've dreamed my dreams
And smoked my pipe by these running streams,

And kept my cabin up here alone,
With all this beauty to call my own.
I've taken my gold with pick and pan
And sent it back to be stained by man.

I've wrestled with rocks and streams for mine
And made my friendships with fir and pine.
Now the world down there may think me odd,
But maybe I won't seem queer to God.

UP AND DOWN THE LANES OF LOVE

Up and down the lanes of love,
With the bright blue skies above,
And the grass beneath our feet,
Oh, so green and Oh, so sweet!
There we wandered, boy and girl,
Sun-kissed was each golden curl;
Hand in hand we used to stray,
Hide-and-seek we used to play;
Just a pair of kids were we,
Laughing, loving, trouble free.

Up and down the lanes of love
With the same blue skies above,

Next we wandered, bride and groom,
With the roses all in bloom;
Arm in arm we strolled along,
Life was then a merry song,
Laughing, dancing as we went,
Lovers, cheerful and content;
No one else, we thought, could be Quite so happy as were we.

Up and down the lanes of love,
Dark and gray the skies above;
Hushed the song-birds' merry tune,
Withered every rose of June.
Grief was ours to bear that day,
All our smiles had passed away;
Sorrow we must bear together,
Love must have its rainy weather,
Keeping still our faith in God,
As the lanes of love we trod.

Up and down the lanes of love,
Still the skies are bright above.
Feeble now we go our way,
Time has turned our hair to gray;
Rain and sunshine, joy and woe,
Both of us have come to know.
All of life's experience
Has been given us to sense;
Still our hearts keep perfect tune
As they did in days of June.

THE FIRST WATCH

If I were asked one thing to name
  Richer in pleasure's golden thrall
Which it has been my lot to claim,
  One treasure which surpasses all
The many which have made me glad—
  The greatest source of pride and joy
Would be that first real watch I had
  When I was but a little boy.

I found it at my breakfast plate
  One birthday morning years ago,
Nor have I language now to state
  The gladness of that startled: "Oh!
A watch! A real watch for me!"
  Such pleasure never comes again;
But once in life a boy can be
  So happy with a watch and chain.

The pride I felt I could not mask,
  Its ticking was a sound sublime.
I hoped that passers-by would ask
  If I could tell to them the time.
A hundred times a day, compelled
  By happy fears my play I dropped
And to my ears that watch I held
  To be convinced it hadn't stopped.

It seemed to me the world must know
That I possessed a timepiece true;
I had a treasure I must show
And artfully I did it, too.
I'd steal a thousand looks to see
If still those hands were moving round,
And wondered if men noticed me
Or heard that gentle ticking sound.

Now to that first watch here I sing
This little feeble hymn of praise,
And all my gratitude I bring
For radiant joy of by-gone days.
And wheresoe'er there dwells a boy,
He, too, shall know what I have known,
And reach the topmost peak of joy
In that first watch he soon shall own.

THE OLD HAT

To-day as I was starting out,
The lady that I write about
Stood at the door as if to chat,
Then handed me an old-time hat,
A bonnet I had worn, I know,
The first time several years ago;
"Now get this cleaned," she said to me,
"And just as good as new 'twill be."

I chuckled as I carried down
That old fedora, rusty brown.
I chuckled, living that scene o'er,
The good wife standing at the door,
As earnest as a wife can be,
Handing that worn-out lid to me,
And saying: "Have this cleaned, my dear,
'Twill serve you for another year."

Let's twist the scene around and see
What would occur if I should be Prompted to try a trick like that
And hand to her an ancient hat,
A bonnet of a vintage rare,
Saying: "It's good enough to wear
Just have this blocked and cleaned, my dear,
'Twill serve you for another year."

I fancy then the fur would fly
If such a trick I dared to try.
She'd wither me with looks of scorn
And spoil another autumn morn.
But let it drop. A man and wife
Have different views of hats and life,
And meekly to the Greek I went
And had it cleaned—and she's content.

ENRICHED

Looking back, it seems to me
All the griefs which had to be Left me, when the pain was o'er,
Richer than I'd been before;
And by every hurt and blow
Suffered in the Long-ago,
I can face the world to-day
In a bigger, kindlier way.

Pleasure doesn't make the man,
Life requires a sterner plan.
He who never knows a care
Never learns what he can bear;
He who never sheds a tear
Never lives through days of fear,
Has no courage he can show
When the winds of winter blow.

When the nights were dark and bleak
And in vain I'd strive to seek
Reasons for my bitter grief,
When I faltered in belief,
Little did I think or know
I should find it better so;
But to-day I've come to see
What those sorrows meant to me.

I am richer by the tears
I have shed in earlier years;
I am happier each morn
For the burdens I have borne;
And for what awaits me yet,
By the trials I have met,
I am stronger, for I know
What it means to bear a blow.

YOUTH AND THE WORLD

There is many a battle that's yet to be won,
There is many a glorious deed to be done.
The world is still young! For the youth at its door
There are tasks some shall do never dreamed of before.
It is not an old world, worn and wrinkled and gray,
It's a world that is being reborn every day.

The old hearts are settled and fixed and they'll do
Nothing that's daring or brilliant or new.
Their days of adventure have long since gone by,
They have finished their tasks and they're waiting to die;
But the youngsters who stand at the world's open door
Have much to achieve never dreamed of before.

On the well-traveled lanes of the land and the sea
Every day will the crowds of humanity be.
On the streets which are paved and the avenues known
Are the people who care not to venture alone.
But the young heart and stout sees the goal that's afar,
And dares to set out where the strange dangers are.

What's not possible now shall be possible when
Some young heart and brave shows the way to all men.
Youth shall remake the world. What is best of to-day
Shall to-morrow to something that's better give way.
So, come you young fellows to life, with a will,
While you work and you dream the world cannot stand still.

A PLEA

God grant me this: the right to come at night
Back to my loved ones, head erect and true;
Beaten and bruised and from a losing fight,
Let me be proud in what I've tried to do.

Let me come home defeated if I must,
But clean of hands, and honor unimpaired,
Still holding firmly to my children's trust,
Still worthy of the faith which they have shared.

God grant me this: whate'er the fates decree,
Or do I win or lose life's little game,
I still would keep my children proud of me,
Nor once regret that they must bear my name.

SENTIMENT

If wealth were all a man required
And all on earth to be desired,
Then he would be a fool to play
And let the dollars slip away.

If nothing mattered more than gain,
And having money ended pain,
Who'd stop at so much cash per hour
To read a book or grow a flower?

If money were the stamp of worth,
The source of fellowship and mirth,
Then he would be a fool who'd spend
The time it takes to make a friend.

But he's the fool who squanders health
And friendship's joys to pile up wealth;
Who tramples beauty down and turns
His every thought on what he earns.

For peace and joy and heart's content
Are born and bred of sentiment,
And who spends all his time for gold
Shall sigh for friends when he is old.

MY AUNT'S BONNET

They say life's simple—but I don't know.
Who can tell where a word will go?
Or how many hopes will rise and fall
With the weakest brick in the cellar wall?
Or how many hearts will break and bleed
As the result of one careless deed?
Why, my old Aunt's bonnet caused more dismay
Than a thousand suns could shine away.

She wore it high through her top-knot pinned,
A perfect kite for a heavy wind,
But the hat would stick though a gale might blow
If she found the place where the pins should go.
One Sunday morning she dressed in haste,
She hadn't a minute which she could waste,
She'd be late for church. Now the tale begins,
She didn't take care with those bonnet pins.

Oh, the wind it howled, and the wind it blew,
And away from her head that bonnet flew!
It swirled up straight to select its course,
First brushing the ears of the deacon's horse;
With a leap he scampered away in fright
And scattered the children, left and right.
A stranger grabbed for the horse's head,
But stumbled and fractured his own instead.

After the bonnet a small boy ran,
Knocked over a woman, and tripped a man.
The deacon's daughter married the chap
Who rescued her from the swaying trap,
And she lived to regret it later on.
In all that town there abided none
Whose life wasn't changed on that dreadful day
When my old Aunt's bonnet was blown away.

Some were crippled, and some went mad,
Some turned saintly, and some turned bad,
Birth and marriage and death and pain
Were all swept down in that bonnet's train.
Wives quarreled with husbands! I can't relate
The endless tricks which were played by fate.
There are folk to-day who had not been born
Had my Aunt stayed home on that Sunday morn.

THE JOY OF GETTING HOME

The joy of getting home again
  Is the sweetest thrill I know.
Though travelers by ship or train
  Are smiling when they go,
The eye is never quite so bright,
  The smile so wide and true,
As when they pass the last home light
  And all their wandering's through.

Oh, I have journeyed down to sea
  And traveled far by rail,
But naught was quite so fair to me
  As that last homeward trail.
Oh, nothing was in London town,
  Or Paris gay, or Rome
With all its splendor and renown,
  So good to see as home.

'Tis good to take these lovely trips,
  'Tis good to get away,
There's pleasure found on sailing ships,
  But travel as you may
You'll learn as most of us have learned,
  Wherever you may roam,
You're happiest when your face is turned
  Toward the lights of home.

A SUMMER DAY

Dreams are for a summer's day!
Truly rich the man who may
Let his cares and burdens shift
While his thoughts in fancy drift—
Drift and bear his soul afar
Where the long-lost splendors are.

Rich the man who for a day
Shuts the noisy world away,
Or indifferent to its urge,
Lies and sees the billows surge
On a peaceful, sunny shore,
Racing back to come once more.

Lost to fame and deaf to greed,
Feeling not the spur of need,
Freed from all the tyrants grim
Which have whipped and driven him;
There he sets his soul at large,
Drifting like a purpled barge.

Golden visions fill his eyes,
All the lust within him dies;
Beauty, from her lovely arms,
Flings to him a thousand charms,
Rich indeed the man who may Dream away a summer day.

SHE WOULDN'T GO TO BED

Once there was a little girl who wouldn't go to bed,
Wanted to sit up all night. That is what she said.
So her pa and ma and nurse said they didn't care,
Went to bed themselves and left her sitting in her chair,
Left her downstairs all alone, turned out every light,
All except the one where she was sitting up all night.

Soon the house got, oh, so still and shadowy and queer!
This little girl who wouldn't sleep began to say:
"Oh, dear,
I wish they hadn't gone upstairs and left me all alone!
I wish the wind would go away and stop that awful moan!
I wish the shutters wouldn't bang! I wish I hadn't said
I'd rather stay up all the night and never go to bed!"

The rocking chair dropped off to sleep, the books upon the shelves
Looked just as though they'd gone to bed and covered up themselves.
Her dolls and tea things lost their charm and grew too tired to play

And nothing looked as bright to her as it had look'd by day.
She heard the great clock ticking and she fancied
that it said:
"It's time that little girls like you were safely tucked in bed."

Then up the stairs she scampered just as fast as she could race
And, oh, it felt so good once more to feel her mother's face!
And, oh, it felt so good to feel her arms and kiss her cheek
And snuggle down beside her and to hear her daddy speak!
And now I ought to tell you when the moon shines overhead,
I know one lovely little girl who's glad to go to bed.

SAID THE CARPENTER TO ME

"What this house is going to be,"
Said the carpenter to me,
"From the plan I cannot see.
With my hammer, saw and plane,
I can build it to remain,
Long to buffet wind and rain.

"Square the room, and strong the roof,
I can make it weather-proof,
True below and fair aloof;
But I cannot guarantee
That this house shall lovely be,
Filled with joy and sorrow-free.

"Shall these rooms with peace be filled?
Here shall anger's voice be stilled?
They must say for whom I build.
When at last I go away,
Here shall all that's tender stay?
Those who come to dwell must say.

"I have finished. Staunch the place,
Now it needs the touch of grace,

Needs a mother's smiling face,
Needs the living spirit here,
Growing lovelier year by year,
Ere this house shall glow with cheer.

"I have tried to build it well—
But shall beauty truly dwell
'Neath this roof? The years must tell.
By the tenderness displayed,
By the brave souls, unafraid,
Must this home at last be made."

HIS PHILOSOPHY

"I'm not a philosopher, bearded and gray,"
Said he unto me.
"I'm simple of speech and I'm plain in my way,
Which is easy to see.
I don't know the whys and the wherefores and whences,
What life really is and just how it commences,
But I do know the living encounter expenses.

"With high-sounding language I cannot compete,
But some things I've learned.
I know that the money for house rent and meat
Must always be earned.
And whether the man be day-toiler or scholar,
If his need be for coal or a tie for his collar
He must either have credit, or dig up the dollar.

"I know that I live and shall live till I die,
And I don't have to read
Deep volumes to tell me as time hurries by
There is much I shall need.
My problem is this: in foul weather or sunny,
My children will frequently want bread and honey
And the grocer who sells them will ask for the money.

"So having to live on the earth day by day,
  Along with the rest,
The problem's not which is the easiest way,
  But which is the best.
My philosophy's this: to look after my fences,
To think of the future before it commences
And to work for an income to meet life's expenses."

THE NEW CAR

I had an old, tired car,
  Worn with long years of travel,
A bus with many a scar
  And stained with pitch and gravel,
And all within our city
Upon the wreck took pity.

Nothing could harm it more,
  Long since was gone its splendor,
And all who looked it o'er
  With it were, oh, so tender!
Truck drivers passing there
Watched out for it with care.

And then I turned it in
  And bought a shiny new one.
Glistened its side of tin.

I'd picked a Royal blue one.
A lady in her car
Gave it its first day's jar.

I left it on the street
In all its regal splendor,
A boy, delivering meat,
Crumpled the forward fender.
The next day it was struck
By one who drove a truck.

Safe is the man who wears
His face well-trimmed with plaster,
Safe seems the car that bears
The scars of grim disaster.
But all the reckless crew
Pick on the car that's new.

THE BAD GOLFER WHO WAS GOOD

"I'm a golfer, St. Peter!" the spirit proclaimed,
"And of much I have done I am truly ashamed.
I have flubbed and I've dubbed to my pitiful cost,
But I blamed not the caddie whenever I lost.

"I've sliced and I've hooked and I've been in the rough,

Twenty years I've played golf, I've had trouble enough!
I've cursed when in sand traps, of that there's no doubt,
But I covered my footprints before I went out.

"I'm a golfer, St. Peter! Just one of the mutts!
My sins they are many, I've taken three putts
Countless times when I shouldn't. My record is black,
But always the divots I cut, I put back!

"I'm an old hundred shooter! I thought I was great
Whenever I finished around ninety-eight;
I was slow at the game, I confess it to you,
But I never refused to let others go through."

"Come in," said St. Peter, "come in and sit down!
Come in and I'll give you a harp and a crown!
I've a welcome for you, with the Saints you may dwell,
For it takes moral courage to play bad golf well."

THE MIND

The mind is that mysterious thing
Which makes the toiler and the king.
It is the realm of thought where dwells
The nursery rhymes the father tells.
It is the source of all that gives
High color to the life he lives.
It starts the smile or shapes the frown,
It lifts man up or holds him down.
It marks the happy singing lad,
It marks the neighbor kind and glad,
And world wide over this we find—
A man is fashioned by his mind.

How strange it is that what we see
And seem to cherish tenderly
Is not the outward garb of clay,
For all are formed the self-same way.
Not in the hands and legs and cheeks,
Not in the common voice which speaks,
Lies man's identity on earth—
All these come with the gift of birth.
But love and friendship and delight
Lie in a world that's hid from sight.
The mind of all is master still
To fashion them for good or ill.

So men and women here are wrought
By this strange hidden power of thought,
And each becomes in life the thing
The mind has long been fashioning.
Man's body moves and eats and drinks
And but reflects the thoughts he thinks.
His every action leaves behind
Merely the prompting of his mind.
Bad men have arms and legs and eyes.
That which we cherish or despise
And shapes each individual soul
Is wholly in the mind's control.

OUR HOUSE

I like to see a lovely lawn
Bediamoned with dew at dawn,
But mine is often trampled bare,
Because the youngsters gather there.

I like a spotless house and clean
Where many a touch of grace is seen,
But mine is often tossed about
By youngsters racing in and out.

I like a quiet house at night
Where I may sit to read and write,
But my peace flies before the tones
Of three brass throated saxophones.

My books to tumult are resigned,
In vain my furniture is shined,
My lawn is bare, my flowers fall,
Youth rides triumphant over all.

I love the grass, I love the rose,
And every living thing that grows.
I love the books I ponder o'er,
But oh, I love the children more!

And so unto myself I say:
Be mine the house where youngsters play.

Oh, little girl, oh, healthy boy,
Be mine the house which you enjoy!

HONEST PEOPLE

Life is queer and people move
Curiously along its groove.
Strange things happen now and then—
Women fair and busy men,
Led by pleasure, want or greed,
Startle us with many a deed.
Up they rise or down they fall,
Life's a puzzle to us all,
But when all is sifted out
Honor calmly walks about.

Neither wealth nor pomp nor fame
Can withstand the touch of shame.
None so clever to elude
Nature's laws of drink or food,
None so smart that he can break
Nature's laws for pleasure's sake.
Life, with all its curious turns,
Soon the shrewd observer learns,
Howsoe'er his battles cease,
Leaves the honest man in peace.

Life is queer, but gentle ways
Win the world's unstinted praise,
Sin and shame and vice are here,
Taking toll from year to year;
But the brave heart and the true
Need not fear what they may do,
And the clean of heart and hand
All these terrors can withstand;
For when all is sifted out
Honor calmly walks about.

THE FIRST EASTER

Dead they left Him in the tomb
And the impenetrable gloom,
Rolled the great stone to the door,
Dead, they thought, forevermore.

Then came Mary Magdalene
Weeping to that bitter scene,
And she found, to her dismay,
That the stone was rolled away.

Cometh Peter then and John,
Him they'd loved to look upon,
And they found His linen there
Left within the sepulchre.

"They have taken Him away!"
Mary cried that Easter Day.
Low, she heard a voice behind:
"Whom is it you seek to find?"

"Tell me where He is!" she cried,
"Him they scourged and crucified.
Here we left Him with the dead!"
"Mary! Mary!" Jesus said.

So by Mary Magdalene
First the risen Christ was seen,
And from every heart that day
Doubt's great stone was rolled away.

THE MISSING MAN

There was a man I once knew well,
Who had no stocks and bonds to sell;
  No subdivided acres which
  In seven years would make me rich;
No sets of books to fill my mind
With knowledge of the deeper kind;
No self-improvement courses in
The mystery of how to win.
Whene'er he called it was to say:
"Well, how are all your folks to-day?"

I wonder where this man has flown?
I wish he'd make his presence known.
  Whene'er he came to visit me,
  He asked no gift for charity,
He never asked me to subscribe
To funds to feed an Indian tribe,
Or carry on deep sea research
Or lift the mortgage on his church.
  Whene'er he called it was to chat
  In fellowship of this and that.

I watch to see him pass my door,
But unto me he comes no more,
  For every caller now I find
  Has dotted lines he wishes signed.
Oh, good old friend! I fancy you

Suspect that I have work to do,
And that is why you stay away,
But come again to me, I pray,
That I may say: "Well, after all,
One man still pays a friendly call."

FOR FISH AND BIRDS

For fish and birds I make this plea,
May they be here long after me,
May those who follow hear the call
Of old Bob White in spring and fall;
And may they share the joy that's mine
When there's a bass upon the line.

I found the world a wondrous place.
A cold wind blowing in my face
Has brought the wild ducks in from sea;
God grant the day shall never be
When youth upon November's shore
Shall see the mallards come no more!

I found the world a garden spot.
God grant the desolating shot
And barbed hook shall not destroy
Some future generation's joy!
Too barren were the earth for words
If gone were all the fish and birds.

Fancy an age that sees no more
The mallards winging into shore;
Fancy a youth with all his dreams
That finds no fish within the streams.
Our world with life is wondrous fair,
God grant we do not strip it bare!

MY LIFE

I have a life I can't escape,
  A life that's mine to mold and shape,
Some things I lack of strength and skill,
  I blunder much and fumble; still
I can in my own way design
  What is to be this life of mine.

It is not mine to say how much
  Of gold and silver I shall clutch,
What heights of glory I shall climb,
  What splendid deeds achieve in time;
Lacking the genius of the great
  The lesser tasks may be my fate.

But I can say what I shall be,
What in my life the world shall see;
Can mold my thoughts and actions here

To what is fine or what is drear.
Though small my skill, I can elect
To keep or lose my self-respect.

No man can kindlier be than I,
No man can more detest a lie,
I can be just as clean and true
As any gifted genius, who
Rises to earthly heights of fame
And wins at last the world's acclaim.

I can be friendly, blithe of heart,
Can build or tear my life apart,
Can happy-natured smile along
And shrug my shoulders at a wrong.
I only choose what is to be
This life which symbolizes me.

MERIT AND THE THRONG

A thousand men filed in by day
To work and later draw their pay;
A thousand men with hopes and dreams,
Ambitions, visions, plans and schemes.
And in the line a youth who said:
"What chance have I to get ahead?
In such a throng, can any tell
Whether or not I labor well?"

Yet merit is so rare a trait
That once it enters by the gate,
Although 'tis mingled with the throng,
The news of it is passed along.
A workman sees a willing boy,
And talks about his find with joy;
A foreman hears the word, and seeks
The lad of whom another speaks.

So up the line the news is passed,
And to the chief it comes at last.
A willing ear to praise he lends,
Then for that eager boy he sends
And gives him little tasks to do
To learn if all that's said be true.
Among the throng the lad is one
He keeps a watchful eye upon.

Oh, youngster, walking with the throng,
Although to-day the road seems long,
Remember that it lies with you
To say what kind of work you'll do.
If you are only passing fair
The chief will never know you're there,
But if you've merit, have no doubt,
The chief will quickly find it out.

THE WASTER

Oh, the days I've wasted, the days I've had to spend
And tossed away to serve a whim, as if they'd have no end.
Old Father Time can tell you that I'm a wayward son,
I've had a dozen fortunes and gone through every one.

I should have turned the grindstone when steel required an edge,
But summer birds were singing upon my window ledge.
I should have strung together small words to make a rhyme,
But summer is for playing and work for wintertime.

They tell me time is money, and well I know that's true,
But who would be a rich man when skies above are blue?
And I have turned from toiling a game of golf to shoot,
And what its cost in silver I wouldn't dare compute.

A slave to fame and fortune I have no wish to be,
There are a thousand splendors on earth I want to see.
A dreamer and a waster I've laughed my way along
Indifferent to fortune, but tempted by a song.

CHECKING THE DAY

I had a full day in my purse
When I arose, and now it's gone!
I wonder if I can rehearse
The squandered hours, one by one,
And count the minutes as I do
The pennies and the dimes I've spent.
I've had a day, once bright and new,
But, oh, for what few things it went!

There were twelve hours when I began,
Good hours worth sixty minutes each,
Yet some of them so swiftly ran
I had no time for thought or speech.

Eight of them to my task I gave,
Glad that it did not ask for more.
Part of the day I tried to save,
But now I cannot say what for.

An hour I spent for idle chat,
Gossip and scandal I confess;
No better off am I for that,
Would I had talked a little less.
I watched steel workers bolt a beam,
What time that cost I don't recall.
How very short the minutes seem
When they are spent on trifles small.

Quite empty is my purse to-night
Which held at dawn a twelve-hour day,
For all of it has taken flight—
Part wisely spent, part thrown away.
I did my task and earned its gain,
But checking deeds with what they cost,
Two missing hours I can't explain,
They must be charged away as lost.

TWO WORLDS

There are two worlds wherein to dwell,
  And one is harsh and stern;
The other lies where none can tell
  And none can ever learn,
For each man keeps a secret place
To meet his spirit face to face.

The world of fact is known to all,
  Its streets are paved and hard
And lined with buildings cold and tall
  And some with windows barred.
There fame and fortune are the gods
Which set the stakes and make the odds.

And what a man is there is not
  The man he'd like to be,
For there the pace is swift and hot,
  In constant strife is he.
Men judge him for the thing he seems
Who never finds his world of dreams.

But in that shadowy vale of thought,
  To which at times he flees,
He finds the peace he long has sought
  And endless beauty sees.
In silence with his dreams he dwells
Where no one either buys or sells.

ON CHURCH BUILDING

God builds no churches! By His plan,
That labor has been left to man.
No spires miraculously rise,
No little mission from the skies
Falls on a bleak and barren place
To be a source of strength and grace.
The humblest church demands its price
In human toil and sacrifice.

Men call the church the House of God,
Towards which the toil stained pilgrims plod
In search of strength and rest and hope,
As blindly through life's mists they grope,
And there God dwells, but it is man
Who builds that house and draws its plan;
Pays for the mortar and the stone
That none need seek for God alone.

There is no church but what proclaims
The gifts of countless generous names.
Ages before us spires were raised
'Neath which Almighty God was praised
As proof that He was then, as now.
Those sacred altars, where men bow
Their heads in prayer and sorrow lifts
Its heavy weight, are Christian gifts!

The humblest spire in mortal ken,
Where God abides, was built by men.
And if the church is still to grow,
Is still the light of hope to throw
Across the valleys of despair,
Men still must build God's house of prayer.
God sends no churches from the skies,
Out of our hearts must they arise!

A FEW NEW TEETH

The dentist tinkered day by day,
With wax and sticky gum;
He built a model out of clay
And shaped it with his thumb.
He made the man a lovely plate,
With three teeth in a row,
And bars of gold to keep them straight,
Then said: "They'll never show.

"Go forth," the dentist told the man,
"As proud as you can be.
Those teeth are perfect. No one can Tell they were bought from me.
Why I, by whom the work was wrought,
The truth had never known.
Were you a stranger I'd have thought
Those teeth were all your own."

While going out he bumped a miss.
"Excuthe me pleathe," he said.
The lady smiled to hear him hiss—
His cheeks went flaming red.
He met a friend upon the street,
Who joined him for a walk
And said: "Let's go where we can eat,
And have a quiet talk."

"I'd rather walk," the man exclaimed.
"Leth thtay upon the threet,
For with you I thould be athamed
Thum tholid food to eat."
"New teeth?" the friend remarked, and low
The troubled man said: "Yeth!
My dentith thwore you'd never know.
However did you guetth?"

BRIDE AND GROOM

Oh, bride and groom, the day is fair
And love is singing everywhere!
And friends are many, smiling now
The while you take your marriage vow;
But life is made of joy and care
And love has many things to bear.

God bless the home which you shall build!
May it with happiness be filled,
May you set forth this lovely June
To many a golden honeymoon;
But storms will come, as old hearts know,
And love must weather many a blow.

Go hand in hand adown the years,
Keep faith through doubts and hurts and tears,
The honeymoon will rise and wane,
Joy will be lost and found again;
The tears must come to every eye,
But love can live when hope must die.

Oh, bride and groom, for you my prayer
Is not that every day be fair,
For that could never be. I pray
That love shall last, whate'er the day;
Through all that comes of grief and pain
And hurt and care may love remain.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK

I can be happy in a boat
And watch the clouds go by.
My collar open at the throat
Unfettered by a tie,
And while I like the fish to bite
And long to have a string,
I do not grumble much at night
If I don't catch a thing.

And so I merely set it down
To illustrate my luck,
When I desert the busy town
To fish, I've never struck
The happy day I hear about,
So fortunate and fair,
When all the boys were taking out
The law's allotment there.

"Oh, happy yesterday!" they cry,
"The fish were running strong!"
To-day there is too bright a sky
Or something else is wrong.
I know the fish are here. I'm told
So many wondrous tales,
But here to-day the wind blows cold
And all my casting fails.

Now I am back in town once more
And now the natives write:
"To-day we landed twenty-four!
You should have felt them bite!"
But vain it is for me to wish.
Luck always turns me down,
I always seem to fish for fish
That bite when I'm in town.

FATE TALKS ABOUT MEN

Into my room a stranger came,
Coarse and rough and a thing to hate,
And I, half-frightened, inquired his name,
Said he with a laugh: "I'm known as Fate."
"Oh!" I answered. "Then you're the man,
Who blocks full many a well-laid plan.

"You made a loafer of one I knew,
At least he says that the fault is yours.
You made a thief of another, who
Now spends the years behind prison doors.
There's many a pitiful thing of shame,
Who sits and sighs and reviles your name."

"Yes, I get blamed for a lot of things,"
Said Fate, with a twinkle in his eye,
"When men must hear what their folly brings
I'm the handiest sort of an alibi.
Harsh things of me may the failures think,
But I never have asked a man to drink.

"I never have asked a man to lie.
I've spilled his dream and I've spoiled his plan,
You see it's my business on earth to try
The moral courage of every man.
I'm a troublesome sort of a chap to meet,
But I've never suggested that man should cheat.

"I hit men hard and I hurt at times.
I cause them trouble, I will agree,
But the fellows who put their hands to crimes
Don't get that sort of a jolt from me.
Men say I'm the cause of a lot of shame,
But in most of the cases I'm not to blame."

NO HONEY-GATHERER

When the bees are in the clover,
And a blue sky's bending over
This old world, aglow with sunshine
Just as far as I can see;
When the breezes are suggesting
All the happiness of resting,
Though it's time to gather honey
Then I'm glad I'm not a bee.

There are some who flit for money
As the bee goes after honey,
There are splendors all around them
Which they never pause to see.
They are slaves to Tyrant Duty,
But when summer spills her beauty
And makes days as fair as this one
Then I'm glad I'm not a bee.

Oh! I think it is much better
Not to be a honey-getter,
I would rather lie and dream here
Underneath this shady tree.
Let the busy bee keep working,
Here's a day just made for shirking,
In this lovely summer weather
I don't want to be a bee.

THE OLD SAILOR TALKS

There was action in the old days when I learned to love the sea,
There was beauty in the canvas which your turbines can't replace.
Oh, the liner is a lady! But she's not the girl for me,
For she's business-like and snappy and there's hardness in her face,
And I like to see my woman wear a little bit of lace.

There was poetry in sailing when the seas were running free,
There was music in the rigging when the wind
began to blow,
But the liner, she is haughty, and she's not the girl
for me,
She walks away from humble ships who try to say
"hello!"
And I like to have my woman sort o' friendly, don't you know.

It's all business now, in sailing, as I think you will agree,
With arrivals and departures just as regular as bed.
Oh, the liner is a lady! But she's not the girl for me,
She always shows about the same each time the log is read,
And I'd rather have a woman with some nonsense in her head.

EQUIPMENT

Figure it out for yourself, my lad,
You've all that the greatest of men have had,
Two arms, two hands, two legs, two eyes,
And a brain to use if you would be wise.
With this equipment they all began,
So start for the top and say, "I can."

Look them over, the wise and great,
They take their food from a common plate,
And similar knives and forks they use,
With similar laces they tie their shoes,
The world considers them brave and smart,
But you've all they had when they made their start.

You can triumph and come to skill,
You can be great if you only will.
You're well equipped for what fight you choose,
You have legs and arms and a brain to use,
And the man who has risen great deeds to do,
Began his life with no more than you.

You are the handicap you must face,
You are the one who must choose your place,
You must say where you want to go,
How much you will study the truth to know.
God has equipped you for life, but He Lets you decide what you want to be.

Courage must come from the soul within,
The man must furnish the will to win.
So figure it out for yourself, my lad,
You were born with all that the great have had,
With your equipment they all began.
Get hold of yourself, and say: "I can."

AUNT JANE WORRIED

Aunt Jane was one of the worrying kind,
Early and late with a troubled mind
Fearing the worst, in her chair she sat
Grieving herself over this and that.

Aunt Jane's particular stock in trade
Was things of which she could be afraid.
There wasn't a horror of which she'd read
That ever escaped from her shaking head.

Murder, robbery, death at sea,
Troubled and frightened her terribly.
Every possible evil which may occur
Was a terrible thing which might happen to her.

She feared death by trolleys, and death by fire,
Nothing but bad news came by wire,
And the curious thing about my Aunt Jane
Is all that she gathered from life was pain.

It never occurred to her once to think
That thousands of steamers at sea don't sink.
By a horrible fate was her life accurst,
She was doomed forever to fear the worst.

Never she looked to receive the best,
Always by gloom was her mind impressed;
And at last death ended life's frightful round,
But not once was she murdered, or robbed, or drowned.

THE GENTLE MAN

His life was gentle, and his mind
The little splendors seemed to find.
The baser side of life he saw,
But from the blemish and the flaw
He turned, as if he understood
That none of us is wholly good.

He lived as one who seemed to know
That as the swift days come and go
  Clouds blanket skies that should be fair,
  Rain is encountered everywhere,
And so o'er every human form
Must blow at times the bitter storm.

As one who loves a garden, he Walked round the world its charms to see.
  Not only by the rose he stayed,
  The tiniest violet in the shade
On his devotion could depend,
To great and low he played the friend.

And as the gardener seems to give
More care to plants which fight to live
  So he, with tenderer regard,
  Befriended those whose tasks were hard.
Thus dealing gently, he became
More than a high and haughty name.

This was his wealth, that good and bad
Of him some happy memory had.
  This was his fame, that high and low
  Their love for him were proud to show.
This his success, that at the end
Men mourned the passing of a friend.

IF TO BE CLEVER

If to be clever means that I must sneer
  At every honest effort to be good,
Must tear to pieces all the brave revere,
  And scorn what isn't clearly understood;
If only what is rotten can be art,
Lord, keep me from the sin of being smart!

If to be clever means that I must jest
  At all that men hold sacred, and disdain
The simple teachings telling what is best,
  Must serve the passions for my pocket's gain;
If brilliance means an utter lack of heart,
Lord, save me from the sin of being smart!

If to be clever means that I must see
  All that is base and vile and call that real,
And finding honor, swear it cannot be
  Because I've known some men to lie and steal;
If wit must tear all gentle worth apart,
Lord, save me from the sin of being smart!

GRACE

Dear Lord, for food and drink and peace
  And all that makes our day so fair,
And for the evening's sweet release
  From duty and its round of care
Once more we turn to Thee above,
Acknowledging Thy boundless love.

Be with us through this night, we pray,
  And make our little circle strong;
May none among us go astray.
  Help us to choose the right from wrong.
Within these walls, however tried,
May love and friendliness abide.

Dear Lord, in every blossoming tree,
  In every bloom our garden knows
Thy marvelous handiwork we see,
  Thy love we find in every rose.
Lord, may the service which is ours
Reflect Thy glory as the flowers.

DREAMS

One broken dream is not the end of dreaming,
  One shattered hope is not the end of all,
Beyond the storm and tempest stars are gleaming,
  Still build your castles, though your castles fall.

Though many dreams come tumbling in disaster,
  And pain and heartache meet us down the years,
Still keep your faith, your dreams and hopes to master
  And seek to find the lesson of your tears.

Not all is as it should be! See how littered
  With sorry wreckage is life's restless stream.
Some dreams are vain, but be you not embittered
  And never cry that you have ceased to dream!

"I DIDN'T THINK AND I FORGOT"

The weakest excuses of all the lot
Are: "I didn't think" and "I forgot."
Worn and weary and haggard and pale,
They follow the path of the men who fail—
In thread-bare raiment from place to place
They've dogged the steps of the human race.
In most of the blunders which men have made
This pitiful pair a part have played.

A man cries out on disaster's brink:
"I should have stopped but I didn't think!"
Was the barn door locked last night? 'Twas not.
And somebody mutters: "Oh, I forgot!"
Since Adam and Eve and the world began,
This pair have followed the trail of man.
The commonest phrases in printer's ink
Are "I forgot" and "I didn't think."

Yet man will think if a pleasure calls,
And there isn't a doubt that he recalls
The promise another has made to him;
And a boy will think that he wants to swim,
And the chances are that he won't forget
That he mustn't come home with his hair all wet.
It's strange, but duty is all I find
That ever escapes from a failure's mind.

Search the burdens which men must bear
And you'll find the tracks of this precious pair.
With needless trouble this world they've filled,
And who can measure the tears they've spilled?
"I forgot" has wrecked ship and train,
"I didn't think" has caused endless pain,
And God must smile, as He sees us sink,
At our "I forgot" and "I didn't think."

GIANT STORIES

One time I told a giant tale before she went to bed,
But now when evening comes I tell her fairy tales instead,
"A story shouldn't frighten her,
It really ought to brighten her,
You should have been ashamed to talk of giants," Mother said.

This giant had an ugly face with whiskers just like wire,
He lived upon a mountain top, and kept a blazing fire
And so one night I chaptered him.
And told her how they captured him—
A story not just suitable when little girls retire.

For in the night she woke and shrieked and shouted loud for me.
And what the trouble was, of course, I hurried in
to see,
"The giant came in here!" she said,
"His ugly face was near," she said,
An awful dream, which Mother says should never,
never be.

So fairy tales at night I tell, of pretty hills and dales,
Of dances up and down the hills and on the blossomy trails.
I know I mustn't frighten her,
And so I try to brighten her,
But strange to say that little miss still begs for giant tales!

THE HARD JOB

It's good to do the hard job, for it's good to play the man,
For the hard job strengthens courage which the easy never can,
And the hard job, when it's over, gives the man a broader smile—
For it brings the joy of knowing that he's done a thing worth while.

Oh, stand you to your hard job with the will to see it through,
Be glad that you can face it and be glad it's yours to do;
It is when the task is mighty and the outcome deep in doubt,
The richest joys are waiting for the man who'll work it out.

Beyond the gloom of failure lies the glory to be won,
When the hard job is accomplished and the doubtful task is done;
For it's manhood in the making and its courage put to test—
So buckle to the hard job—it's your chance to do your best.

LIFE'S NEEDS

Oh, let me have my work to do,
A book to read for an hour or two;
A garden, for an outside room,
Where little things I've planted bloom;
A dog to follow at my heels;
My children's laughter at my meals,
And love to greet me at the door,
And I'll not ask this world for more.

Just grant me strength to face the day;
The wit a grown man's part to play;
A few good friends my lot to share;
A suit of clothes that's fit to wear;
A good night's rest when day is done;
The zest for sport, the taste for fun;
An eye for all that's fair to see,
And full contented I shall be.

No climber I, who would ascend
Beyond the reach of last year's friends.
Give me a few things such as these:
Companionship with flowers and trees,
And summer's birds; the faith to bear
Whate'er of sorrow is my share;
And love to last till life is o'er,
And I'll not ask the world for more.

SEA-DREAMS

I never see a gallant ship go steaming out to sea,
But what a little boy who was comes running back
to me,
A little chap I thought was dead or lost forevermore,
Who used to watch the ships go out and long to quit the shore.

He followed them to India, to China and Japan,
He told the flying sea gulls that he'd be a sailor-man.
"Some day," he said, "I'll own a ship and sail to Singapore,
And maybe bring a parrot back, or two or three or four."

And often when he went to bed, this little boy would lie
And fancy that the ceiling was a wide and starry sky;
The ocean was beneath him, and as happy as could be
He was master of a vessel that was putting out to sea.

But something happened to the lad, and now he is no more,
For in his place there is a man who never leaves the shore;
I often think of him as dead, but back he comes to me
Whene'er I see a gallant ship go steaming out to sea.

THE TRAGEDIES OF INNOCENCE

When sages old on life reflect,
'Tis strange they seldom recollect
The floods of tears which daily rise
In countless little children's eyes,
But see upon life's moving stage
Only the tragedies of age.

Yet innocence is prey to grief
Unsoothed by any firm belief.
To-day her favorite doll she dropped,
Her little heart in terror stopped,
And with the crash the sunshine fled
Because her lovely child was dead.

That stab of anguish was as real
As any shock which grown-ups feel.
Age could not sorrow plainer speak
Than those great tears upon her cheek.
The day her lovely goldfish died
The whole night long she sobbed and cried.

Say not that hurt and loss and care
Are only for the old to bear.
For each must suffer in his turn
Since life to one and all is stern.
And scenes on which old age has smiled
Were bitter sorrows to a child.

TEAM WORK

It's all very well to have courage and skill
And it's fine to be counted a star,
But the single deed with its touch of thrill
Doesn't tell us the man you are;
For there's no lone hand in the game we play,
We must work to a bigger scheme,
And the thing that counts in the world to-day
Is, How do you pull with the team?

They may sound your praise and call you great,
They may single you out for fame,
But you must work with your running mate
Or you'll never win the game;
Oh, never the work of life is done
By the man with a selfish dream,
For the battle is lost or the battle is won
By the spirit of the team.

You may think it fine to be praised for skill,
But a greater thing to do
Is to set your mind and set your will
On the goal that's just in view;
It's helping your fellowman to score
When his chances hopeless seem;
It's forgetting self till the game is o'er
And fighting for the team.

HAD YOUTH BEEN WILLING TO LISTEN

If youth had been willing to listen
To all that its grandfathers told,
If the gray-bearded sage by the weight of his age
Had been able attention to hold,
We'd be reading by candles and heating with wood,
And where we were then we'd have certainly stood.

If youth had been willing to listen
To the warnings and hints of the wise,
Had it taken as true all the best which they knew,
And believed that no higher we'd rise,
The windows of sick rooms would still be kept shut
And we'd still use a cobweb to bandage a cut.

If youth had been willing to listen,
Had it clung to the best of the past,
With oxen right now we'd be struggling to plough
And thinking a horse travels fast.
We'd have stood where we were beyond question or doubt
If some pestilent germ hadn't wiped us all out.

So, although I am gray at the temples,
And settled and fixed in my ways,
I wouldn't hold youth to the limits of truth
That I learned in my brief yesterdays.
And I say to myself as they come and they go:
"Those kids may find something this age doesn't know."

THE CANDY-MAN

All-day suckers and lollypops,
Maple fudges and chocolate drops!
Wares that satisfy; goods that please!
Who sells lovelier things than these?
Who, among all of our working clan,
Has a happier trade than the candy-man?

Peppermint sticks and nougat bars!
Lemon and strawberry drops in jars!
Where on the earth is a job which beats
The glorious business of selling sweets?
Here is a salesman who satisfies
And gladdens the heart of the one who buys.

All day long the children race
With shouts of glee to his tempting place;
Never a customer cross appears,
Laughter is all that he ever hears.
Friendship is all that he ever meets—
For he's in the business of selling sweets.

If I were starting my life again,
I wouldn't be slave to a faulty pen,
I wouldn't barter life's joy for fame,
But over a shop I would nail my name;
I'd be the candy man, proud to tell
That I had nothing but sweets to sell.

STUDY THE RULES

Oh, whether it's business or whether it's sport,
Study the rules.
Know every one of them, long and the short.
Study the rules.
Know what you may do, and what you may not.
Know what your rights are. 'Twill help you a lot
In the critical times when the battle is hot.
Study the rules.

Life's not a scramble, and sport's not a mess.
Study the rules.
Nothing is left to haphazard or guess.
Study the rules.
Know what's a foul blow, and what is a fair;
Know all the penalties recognized there;
Know what to go for, and what to beware.
Study the rules.

Nature has fixed for us definite laws.
Study the rules!
Every effect is the child of a cause.
Study the rules.
Nature has penalties she will inflict,
When it comes to enforcing them nature is strict.
Her eyes are wide open. She never is tricked.
Study the rules.

Play to your best in the game as it's played.
Study the rules.
Know how a fair reputation is made.
Study the rules.
Sport has a standard, and life has a plan—
Don't go at them blindly; learn all that you can—
Know all that is asked and required of a man.
Study the rules!

THE BATTERED DREAM SHIP

Oh, once I sent a ship to sea, and Hope was on her bow,
But Time has brought her back to me and Wisdom's painted now;
Yes, Time has brought me many things and some of them were good,
And some of them were failure's stings I little understood.

When Hope set forth the dream was fair, the sea was calm and blue,
I knew men met with storms out there and had to ride them through;
But still I dreamed my ship would ride and weather every blow,
For Hope flings many a truth aside which Wisdom comes to know.

The storms have come with bitter cold, I've prayed unto the Lord,
I've had false cargoes in the hold and thrown them
overboard;
I've trimmed my sails to meet the gale, I've cut my journey short;
With battered hulk and tattered sail at last I've come to port.

'Tis not enough to hope and dream, for storms will surely rise,
However smooth the sea may seem, 'tis there disaster lies;
And I have learned from time and stress, that those who ride the wave
And come at last to happiness must suffer and be brave.

THE HOME TOWN

It doesn't matter much be its buildings great or small,
The home town, the home town is the best town, after all.
The cities of the millions have the sun and stars above,
But they lack the friendly faces of the few you've learned to love,
And with all their pomp of riches and with all their teeming throngs,
The heart of man is rooted in the town where he belongs.

There are places good to visit, there are cities fair to see,
There are haunts of charm and beauty where at times it's good to be,
But the humblest little hamlet sings a melody to some,
And no matter where they travel it is calling them to come;
Though cities rise to greatness and are gay with gaudy dress,
There is something in the home town which no other towns possess.
The home town has a treasure which the distance cannot gain,

It is there the hearts are kindest, there the gentlest friends remain;
It is there a mystic something seems to permeate
the air
To set the weary wanderer to wishing he were there;
And be it great or humble, it still holds mankind
in thrall,
For the home town, the home town, is the best town after all.

BENEATH THE STARS

Beneath the stars at night when all was clear,
We sat and talked and wondered how and when
The truth first broke within the sight of men;
What was it set them dreaming, thinking here;
Led them to hope and struggle year by year,
To turn their backs upon the cave man's den;
See order here and beauty's charm and then
Discover God where all seemed bleak and drear.

"They must have felt within themselves," one said,
"The spark eternal and the fire divine;
They must have heard God whispering overhead
On nights like this with every star ashine."
And all agreed that man began to rise
When first he sensed the splendor of the skies.

PERILS OF A PUBLIC SPEAKER

A public speaker's lot is not an easy one to bear,
There's many a slip twixt thought and lip which takes him unaware,
For the ablest chap will meet a trap he never dreamed was there.

From year to year uncounted queer and startling things have sprung
All unforeseen, where I have been, to trip my halting tongue;
I've stood in state, compelled to wait, while parents spanked their young.

But last July, I'll vow that I met my extremest fate,
In church I stood, with all the good, a moment to orate,
With one brave swoop I looped the loop with their collection plate.

I did not know it stood below and just within my reach,
My only thought was what I ought to mention in my speech.
I flicked my hand. You understand, that gesture was a peach!

Direct and straight I caught that plate beneath its velvet chin,
The nickels flew as nickels do, the dimes went rolling in
The furnace pipe. Oh, cruel swipe, which started such a din!

That goodly coin went down to join perdition's blazing coals,
While much concerned I stood and learned how far a quarter rolls.
I lost the speech, designed to reach those panting, thirsty souls.

With one fell crash, I knocked that cash right back from whence it came;
The parson sighed, the warden cried, my cheeks grew red with shame.
The children fought for dimes. They thought it was a scrambling game.

At times I've had some moments sad, some cruel pranks of fate,
But never quite so grim a plight, I venture now to state,
As when in church, from off its perch, I knocked that money plate.

A HINT

My son, when plans have gone astray
  And careless blunders bring
The crash which spoils your hopeful day
  Or failure's bitter sting,
Remember, as you face despair,
The dullest fool knows how to swear.

When things go wrong, as oft they will,
  Don't let your passions go;
Remember signs of temper ill
  The dullest mind can show.
It's proof of neither strength nor brains
To whine too loudly at your pains.

An idiot can curse and swear,
  A dolt can rave and shriek,
But oft it calls for courage rare
  No angry word to speak.
Fools are proficiently profane.
Who would stay cool must have a brain.

THE DUB GOLFER

I'm the sensitive soul that is known as the dub!
I'm the fellow that's shunned by the boys at the club.
On the course I am slow,
And I get in the way.
There is much I don't know
About golf, I may say.
I'm supposed to stand by when good golfers shout "fore!"
And if I refuse all the members get sore.
I'm never considered when matches are made,
But my bill always comes when the dues must be paid.

I'm laughed at by youngsters who drive straight and far.
I'm jeered at by boys who can shoot holes at par.
I'm a dub at the game
And I just plod along,
But I'll add, just the same,
That I'm one of a throng.
We may not be much in the tournament play,
We may clog up the course in our pitiful way;
We're not wanted out there, but they never forget
To assess us whenever they've run into debt.

I'm a dub with the many; despised by the few.
Old Hundred's the best I can possibly do.

But I notice when they
Post the names at the club
Of the boys who don't pay,
There is seldom a dub.
It's often the wonderful golfer who's short,
The fellow who shouts we've no place in the sport.
And I shudder to think what the clubs would be like
If we dubs got together and went on a strike.

INDIVIDUALITY

Some say that chance or guess or hazard makes
The things we grow to be. That unto earth
We're plunged like plummets in the hour of birth
To find our places when cold reason wakes;
To crawl and stumble through our own mistakes
And blindly seek for comfort and for mirth;
That on the path where one man proves his worth
Another with the self-same courage breaks.

I think there is a time which comes to all
When each must see his life a perfect whole;
Must feel that he, in some way, large or small,
Is shaping, not a fortune, but a soul.
That in the end, in spite of all mistakes,
His worth is fashioned by the choice he makes.

STYLE

I've never worn a high silk hat,
  I've never borne a cane,
And to the gray pearl-buttoned spat
  Indifferent I remain.

I do not quarrel with the men
  Who wear these things with grace,
Spats now are seen on nine in ten
  Until they're commonplace.

And men there are can walk the street
  En route to church or not,
And seem at ease, to all they meet,
  Beneath a chimney pot.

And some there are can swing a cane
  With masters of the art,
But I forever must remain
  Outside the very smart.

For if I owned a high silk hat
  I'd leave it on the shelf,
Beneath a glistening lid like that
  I'd have to laugh myself.

And if in spats I walked about Uneasy I would be,

Expecting everyone to shout
  Derisively at me.

And so I watch the men who wear
  The nobby things so well
And wonder how it is they dare
  To be so very swell.

I see them in their Sunday best
  Stroll easily about,
But were I dressed as they are dressed
  I'd never venture out.

GARDENERS

Shame seldom gets the man who sees
Beauty in growing plants and trees.
Who keeps a garden trim and fair
Has little time for sin to spare.
Who loves to work among the flowers
Has many a task for idle hours.

Love lingers where the roses grow.
The men and women who bestow
Some time on poppies, pansies, phlox,
And give their thought to hollyhocks,
And learn to know them all by name,
Will seldom blunder into shame.

Who loves a little garden place
Can laugh temptation in the face.
The flowers which are his joy and pride
Will keep him gladly occupied,
For he will give to beauty fair
Whatever time he has to spare.

I never see a garden small,
With morning glories on the wall
And little blooms, but what I say
Here is a home that's built to stay.
Here dwell, with fern and mignonette,
Good people shame will never get.

THE FINE ARTS

Give us more lovers of beauty,
More lovers of gardens, and we Shall lessen our need for your cannon
And iron-clad ships of the sea.

Give us more lovers of music,
More lovers of pictures and books,
And we'll fill up the world with good neighbors
And dwindle the number of crooks.

For hatred and malice and scheming
And envy and cunning and greed
And all that makes crime a temptation
Are not in an art lover's creed.

Who gives his attention to beauty,
Who cherishes laughter and song,
And is thrilled by the glory of planets,
Not often another will wrong.

In gardens, in childhood, in painting,
In music are safety and peace,
So give us more lovers of beauty
That hatred and quarrels may cease.

POSSESSION

The woods and fields and trees are ours
With all their lavish wealth of flowers;
The stars at night which brightly shine,
The morning sun, are yours and mine;
And added to such joys as these
We stand possessors of the breeze.

Who calls us poor, because we lack
The nation's printed yellow-back,
Is only partly right. We share
God's mercy with the millionaire.
No more of beauty can he see
Than that which smiles at you and me.

We own the earth for all our time.
Wherever summer roses climb
For us to gaze on, they are ours.
Where'er a snow-capped mountain towers
We've but to turn our heads to say,
That splendid thing is ours to-day.

To us the blue of Heaven belongs.
Ours are the wild birds' merry songs.
Silver and gold are scarce, but oh,
What countless charms the days bestow!
And here, right at our humble doors,
Of splendor we have endless stores.

THE WISE

Some look at care as if it should not be,
  As if mishaps to them should never fall;
Though hurt and pain must come to you and me
  They should know life and never wince at all.

What strange philosophy is this which sees
  The tears of grief fill up a neighbor's eyes
And says: "I shall be spared such agonies;
  My babe shall live, though many another dies?"

Thus blinded to life's facts most common-place,
  Some sing and dance and spend their little wage.
Then comes the day they have a loss to face
  And bitterly they fly into a rage.

Having no strength for trouble and no wit,
  These self-deluded persons turn and flee.
How could they face a blow, prepared for it,
  Who have not thought that such a thing must be?

Wiser are they who know how close are tears,
  How near is trouble in its various shapes.
They build a wall of faith against their fears
  And plan for hurts from which no one escapes.

THE ORGANIST

"I played so badly," said the organist,
"I'm thankful but a few
Came here to-night through all the fog and mist
To hear me through.

"My fingers seemed to fumble with the keys
As if they, too, were proud
And would not bend a little, just to please
So small and poor a crowd."

And saying this, he left the cold, dim hall;
But one there was who stayed,
Still lingering, as if trying to recall
Some melody he'd played.

"How glorious it was!" she said to me.
"What matters rain,
When one by music can uplifted be Above all pain?"

And so I set this down in hope that he
May learn and smile,
Finding that work, which poor he deemed to be,
Was still worth while.

DEATH, THE COLLECTOR

Death, the collector, came to him and said:
"I want the payment for your drink and bread!
I want the price which tenants all must pay
For having occupied a house of clay.
This is a bill which cannot be denied."
"Please call another time," the man replied.

"I'm sorry, but to-day I'm not prepared.
I really thought your master little cared
How long this lease of mine on earth should run.
I've planned some work which still is far from done.
There's still a hill or two I wish to climb;
Come back, collector, at some other time."

"I've heard that story countless times before,"
Said the collector, standing at the door.
"You say you want more time! Well, Mr. Man,
Give me the date precisely, if you can.
Suppose I grant you five years more or ten,
Are you quite sure that you'll be ready then?

"When will your work be finished? Can you say
At fifty with a smile you'll go away?
At sixty shall I call? and will you then
Be glad to quit the fellowship of men?
Ah no, my friend, only the Master knows
The day and hour life's mortgage to foreclose!"

SUMMER

Bees are in the blossoms,
Birds are on the wing,
Roses climb, and summertime
Is kissing every thing.
Little pansy faces
Wink and smile at me,
And far and near there's not a tear
That human eye can see.

There's beauty in the garden,
There's beauty in the sky,
The stately phlox and hollyhocks
Have put their sorrows by.
The gentle breath of summer
Has blown the cares away;
All nature sings, for morning brings
Another lovely day.

Yet some are blind to beauty
And some are deaf to song;
The troubled brow is heard to vow
That all the world is wrong.
And some display their sorrow,
And some bewail their woe
And some men sigh that love must die
And summertime must go.

Yet some there are who blossom
  Like roses in the sun,
Who dare to climb in summertime
  When all their care is done.
They hide 'neath smiles of beauty
  The sorrows they have borne,
They seem content that God hath sent
  Another lovely morn.

THE CYNIC

In all this world of loveliness there lies
Some blemish to attract the cynic's eyes;
The rose of June is born of ache and hurt;
The cynic says: "Its roots are in the dirt."

A little child comes racing down the street;
The cynic says: " 'Twill grow to be a cheat."
Ground for a hospital a rich man buys;
The cynic jeers: "It pays to advertise."

Honor is doubted, mercy a mistake.
The marriage vow is only made to break;
The cheerful neighbor is a grinning fool,
And only idiots live by law and rule.

Yet youth goes blithely singing on its way,
And men and women brave the heat of day,
Finding life's beauty worth its cost in tears;
And joy exists, despite the cynic's sneers.

WHO GETS THE WATCH AND CHAIN

I've sat upon his left, and I
  Have sat upon his right,
I've heard him sob, I've heard him sigh
  On many a banquet night.
Oh, we're a sentimental crew,
  The fact is very plain,
I'll prove it by the fellow who Receives the watch and chain.

He may appear a man severe,
  But let the speech begin,
And you can see the falling tear
  And mark the trembling chin.
He tries to speak, but seldom can,
  A fog obscures his brain,
I'm always sorry for the man
  Who gets the watch and chain.

I've sat where I could hear his heart
In mortal anguish thump,
I've watched the grateful tear drops start,
I've seen that awful lump
Come rising in his throat, and I
Have wondered at his pain,
Why must the fellow always cry
Who gets the watch and chain?

Man likes to pose as harsh and stern,
But underneath his vest
Most of us some day come to learn
He's easily distressed.
When he is honored by his clan
His tears will fall like rain,
Grief always overcomes the man
Who gets the watch and chain.

HER AWFUL BROTHER

Who teaches little Janet slang,
And trains those lips to say: "Gol Dang!"?
Her awful brother!
Who whispers wise cracks in her ear
When none to stop his pranks is near?
Her awful brother!

Who thinks up things for her to say
To shock her grandma day by day?
  Her awful brother!
Who laughs to hear her cry: "Oh, heck!"
Or "be your age!" And "wash your neck!"
  Her awful brother!

When friends have happened in for tea,
Who knows she'll mutter loud: "Oh gee!"
  Her awful brother!
Who likes to have his sister rough,
And fills her head with dreadful stuff?
  Her awful brother!

And yet, despite his love of mirth,
Who thinks that child the best on earth?
  That awful brother!
And who is it of whom she'll boast
And tell you that she loves the most?
  That awful brother!

THE FOOL

I'm the sort of a fool that will pull up a chair,
And then let a child come and rumple his hair,
And climb on his stomach and wiggle about,
Go through his pockets and empty them out,
And say when such mischievous rompings are done:
"Well, wasn't it fun?"

I'm the sort of a fool that will settle to read
A book, or a paper, a tract, or a screed,
And then let a blue-eyed and plump little maid,
Who of nobody living seems ever afraid,
Come right up and snatch what I'm reading away
Shouting: "Come, let us play!"

I'm the sort of a fool that will calmly sit by,
While a cute little finger is poked in his eye,
And a cute little foot kicks him square in the front
So hard that the neighbors are shocked at his grunt,
And then say with a grin when the fooling is done,
"Well, wasn't it fun!"

THE SINGING BIRD

Oh, singing bird! I wonder now and then,
Are you less troubled than world-weary men?
Do all your hopes come true, and is your nest
Always a sweet and happy place of rest?

I've seen you battle with your neighbors strong,
I fancy that at times you suffer wrong,
I know you must have fears, because the cat
Who seeks to take your life has taught me that.

Is yours an easy life? Have you no care?
That every morn I hear you singing there;
Do all your babies live? I hear no sigh.
In bird-life does no loved one ever die?

Man wails his lot and calls life harsh and rude,
Oh, happy bird! Do you not toil for food?
Have you no tasks which hold you fast by day?
Feel you no pains that you can seem so gay?

Ah yes, you share our cares, oh singing bird,
Yet from your throat there comes no scolding word!
In spite of all life's hurts, while you survive
You tell the world 'tis sweet to be alive!

THE HORN HONKER

The human family is queer.
It does a lot of foolish things—
Too many to be printed here.
We move when habit pulls the strings,
But there's one high above the rest
Deserving of his fellow's scorn,
He is a nuisance and a pest—
The driver with the honking horn.

When suddenly the traffic stops
And twenty cars are in a line,
Held there by semaphores and cops
And none may go without the sign,
Always some dull and empty mind
Without a trace of reason born,
Who thinks he should not stay behind,
Begins to toot upon his horn.

I wonder if he thinks that we
Are staying there to please a whim,
Or lined up twenty deep to be
A special barrier to him?
'Twould seem to any thinking man
That were the roadway clear we'd go,
But he will start the caravan,
He owns a horn which he can blow!

I've sat and wondered in a line,
When traffic jams, as oft it will,
Just what this bird of queer design
Imagines keeps us standing still.
Yet ever from the distant rear,
At noon, or night, or early morn,
Somehow we always have to hear
The senseless honker of the horn.

A FRIEND

A friend is one who stands to share
Your every touch of grief and care.
He comes by chance, but stays by choice;
Your praises he is quick to voice.

No grievous fault or passing whim
Can make an enemy of him.
And though your need be great or small,
His strength is yours throughout it all.

No matter where your path may turn
Your welfare is his chief concern.
No matter what your dream may be
He prays your triumph soon to see.

There is no wish your tongue can tell
But what it is your friend's as well.
The life of him who has a friend
Is double-guarded to the end.

THE YOUNG DOCTOR

They said he was a doctor six or seven months ago,
They gave him a diploma he could frame and proudly show,
And they said: "Go out and practice and just show 'em what you know."

Now I've never been a doctor, but a lot of them I've met,
And that first year, so they tell me, is a year they won't forget—
With the practice slow in growing, and the mustache slower yet.

So I chuckled when I saw him, and his curious mustache,
And I chuckled when I heard him sob about his lack of cash,
And the scarcity of people with the measles or a rash.

"I've a very fine diploma," he explained, "upon a peg,
But if something doesn't happen I shall soon be forced to beg;
It's a lonely business waiting for some fool to break his leg."

The older doctors listened to his dismal tale of woe,
And a flood of reminiscence then it seemed began to flow—
They had all been youthful doctors in the distant long ago.

They had all sat down and waited through that terrifying year,
With their skill and knowledge ready for a promising career;
They'd all grown those first mustaches so that older they'd appear.

I still see that youthful doctor with the sadness in his eye,
Sitting bravely in his office while the sick world travels by—
When that first poor patient finds him, Oh, I hope he doesn't die!

THE FLAG

"Why do we have a flag?" asked she,
The greatest question box alive,
Astounding and perplexing me,
Although her years are scarcely five.
"Why do we have a flag?" and I
Had never thought to wonder why.

"At first," said I, "when life began
Then nothing very good was known.
The greatest was the strongest man.
You've seen dogs fighting for a bone,
Well, human beings just that way
Fought for their food from day to day.

"Then men began to think and see
A way that led to better things,
And little groups began to be,
They formed in tribes and chose their kings,
And to distinguish clan from clan
The idea of a flag began.

"Then one flag meant we fight for land,
Another for this king we'll die.
And soldiers battled, hand to hand,
To keep their banner in the sky,
But in those ages long ago
There was so much they couldn't know.

"And many flags were trampled down,
For men to learn are very slow;
That love and truth support a crown
Was something that they didn't know.
And many bitter wars were fought
To pave the way for nobler thought.

"And now our flag is waving there
To tell the world that you and I,
And all our neighbors everywhere
Who fling Old Glory to the sky,
Are members of that mighty clan
Which seeks the betterment of man.

"Now when you see it in the skies,
The red, the white and starry blue,
Remember as it proudly flies
It's really representing you,
It's telling to the world afar
What kind of little girl you are."

THE YOUNGER GENERATION

This younger generation seems
  To mock at all our preaching;
To want to build its house of dreams
  Without our wiser teaching.

It looks at us with cool disdain
  And scorns the hints we're giving.
We've lived, of course, but all in vain;
  What do we know of living?

We are the kill-joys of the place
  Who cry: "Beware of strangers.
Sin lurks behind the smiling face.
  The streets are full of dangers."

So, poor old fogies that we are,
  We sit with fingers drumming,
The pale, despairing Pa and Ma
  Who dread what next is coming.

Ah, well! one time at counsel wise
  We sneered in youth's elation;
We scorned the old who would advise
  To seek our own salvation.

So why should we grow sorely vexed,
Or trouble seek to borrow?
They'll be the kill-joys of the next
Glad age which starts to-morrow.

The good advice they're heeding not
They'll very soon be giving,
And hear their children wonder what
They know of life and living.

PRAYER FOR A LITTLE GIRL

Dear Lord, our little baby bless
And fill her life with happiness.
Protect her through the coming years
And keep her lovely eyes from tears;
Keep her from pain and let her stay
As perfect as she is to-day.

Dear Lord, watch over her, lest she Shall catch some ugly fault from me;
Guard her from selfishness and pride,
From anger at some whim denied.
And as the swift years come and go,
Grant that still lovelier she may grow.

Dear Lord, we ask, keep pure her mind,
Grant that no hasty thought may find
Lodgment therein, but from above
Send her the wisdom of Thy love.
May there be nothing base or vile
The joy of knowledge to defile.

Dear Lord, this for our babe we ask,
The strength and courage for her task,
Keep her from sin, and let her be Always as radiant to see,
As beautiful and blithe and gay,
As perfect as she is to-day.

COUNTING THE BABIES

How many babies have you?
Well, really we've more than a few!
We've little Miss Laughter
And little Miss Pout,
And then there is little
Miss Scamperabout;
I never have counted them, good, bad and fair,
For the number is constantly changing I swear.

We've babies too many to tell,
We've little Miss Arrogant Belle,
We've little Miss Mischief
And little Miss Bold,

We've little Miss Whimper
And little Miss Scold.
And little Miss Hunger, who gets in the way,
Begging for cookies each hour of the day.

You'd not see them all in a week,
There's the bashful and little Miss Meek.
We've little Miss Blue Eyes
And little Miss Don't,
And that dreadful and Troublesome little Miss Won't!
And the one that's as grasping as misers can be,
I refer to our little Miss Give It To Me!

I wish all their names that I knew,
There's little Miss Take Off Her Shoe.
There's little Miss Tippy-toe,
Little Miss Clutch,
Little Miss Sticky-thumbs,
Ruining much,
We've little Miss Drowsy, but need I keep on?
We've every known baby, and yet we've but one!

THE FUTURE

'Tis well enough to brag and boast,
But men who really do the most Sit very still.
They're very conscious all the time
To-morrow they will have to climb
  Another hill.
Nor all the little dreams come true
Make up for deeds they want to do.

Achievement is a pleasant thing,
But there's no end to conquering,
  And wise men see
That what is done, however fair,
Cannot in any way compare
  With what's to be.
And wise men's thoughts are ever turned
On secrets that are still unlearned.

I praise my skillful surgeon's hand.
"So much you've come to understand,"
  To him I say.
And then he smiles and whispers low;
"The things I really want to know
  Lie far away.
You think I've learned a lot, but oh,
There is so much I do not know!"

There is no conquest all complete;
No stopping place for human feet;
  No final goal.
Onward and upward men ascend
And none of us shall see the end
  Of glory's scroll.
But small and trivial is the past,
It is the future which is vast!

MEN OF SCIENCE

While ordinary mortals play
And laugh and dance the hours away,
The men of science, hid from sight,
Toil at their problems through the night
Within a laboratory room
Seeking to bring a thought to bloom.

We laugh and jest and eat and sleep,
The paths we tread are rutted deep,
The little tasks we're hired to face
Are known to all and commonplace,
But men of science fare alone
Into the future's great unknown.

From ceaseless toil at last there springs
One of the world's astounding things,
Proved beyond doubt and fit for fools
To place within their kits and tools,
And this becomes our common text:
"What will mankind discover next?"

We are the waiters of the world,
Debtors to every test tube curled;
The pale dependents on the few
Who bring to birth the glorious new.
Ours is to wonder while we live
What next the scientists will give.

A MOTHER FINDS REST

And now she dwells where neither doubt nor fear
May find her breast;
No crying child may now disturb her here
Or break her rest.

Ended the ache of living. Here she lies
In wondrous peace.
God left a smile about her lovely eyes
With her release.

How oft we fretted her or caused her pain,
We cannot say.
Long hours she watched beside the window pane
With us away.

Her sleep we broke with whimpering and sighs
When we were ill.
Nor thought it much to rouse her with our cries,
As children will.

But now we suffer so, and vainly call
For her to come.
Her feet will never tread again the hall,
Her lips are dumb.

Love had no more sweet service to provide,
But this we know,
She'll watch for us upon the other side,
Who tried her so.

IN TIME OF TRIAL

Oh, I have fared through laughter 'neath skies of summer blue!
And many an hour of mirth and joy I've danced and scampered through,
But, Lord, when joy was mine to know, I gave no thought to you.

I've had my days of pleasure and I've had my gold to spend,
But when my purse was plump and full I thought 'twould never end,
And when I had no care to face I didn't need a friend.

I've whistled down the summer wind, I've sung a merry tune.
We never think of winter's snow when we are deep in June,
And no one dreams when pleasure calls that it will go so soon.

But, Lord, the skies are gray to-day and I am deep in care,
And I have need for help and strength my weight of grief to bear,
And so, like many an erring son, I turn to Thee in prayer.

WHO BUILDS A HOUSE

Who builds a house and plants a rose or two
  Gives to the world a symbol of his best;
Makes public pledge in all things to be true
  To meet with courage every bitter test.

His country can depend on him, for he Becomes a partner in her wealth and peace.
Who builds a house makes open guarantee
  That loyalty and faith shall never cease.

His friends must know him for an earnest man,
  His neighbors know he shares their hopes and fears.
Who builds a house does all that mortal can
  To show he will be steadfast through the years.

He is no nomad, moving with the night,
  No wanderer, drifting off from place to place.
Who builds a house has sworn to do the right,
  To be the strength and bulwark of his race.

God bless these houses where the brave men dwell,
  And keep them safe whatever storms descend;
Prosper their dreams and let their hopes go well.
  On them our glory and our peace depend.

BIRD NESTS

What a wonder world it is
  For a little girl of five
At the June time of the year,
  And so good to be alive,
With the meadows to explore,
  Seeking bird nests near and far,
And a dad of forty-four
  Who can show her where they are!

Every evening after tea
  We go wandering about
To the nests which we have found,
  Where the little birds are out.
And we tiptoe hand in hand
  To a certain lovely crest
Where delightedly we stand
  At a killdeer's curious nest.

And a meadow-lark we know
  With five babies of her own!
What a wonder world it is,
  And what miracles are shown!

She can scarcely stay for tea—
  How she bolts her pudding through,
With so much she wants to see
  And so much she wants to do!

So we hurry out of doors
  And excitedly we race
To the mother meadow lark
  And the killdeer's secret place.
And we talk of God Who made
  All the birds and trees and flowers,
And we whisper, half afraid:
  "What a wonder world is ours."

CANTERBURY BELLS

I stand and look about to-day
  And something plainly tells
The gardens are expecting May
  And Canterbury Bells.

I cannot hear the slightest sound,
  But somehow I can feel
A certain bustling underground
  That's very near and real.

Strange mysteries are going on
  Within the damp and gloom;
In worlds I cannot look upon
  The roses plan to bloom.

But I can only guess their plans
  And wait and watch them toil,
Convinced a greater work than man's
  Goes on below the soil.

The power of God I feel and see
  In every bud that swells,
In blossoms on the apple tree
  And Canterbury Bells.

TO A LITTLE GIRL

Little girl, just half-past three,
Take this little rhyme from me,
All the joy that gold can bring,
All the songs the birds can sing,
All this world can hold to give
Grown-up men the while they live,
Hath not half the charm of you
And the lovely things you do.

Little girl, just half-past three,
When God sent you down to me
Oft I wonder, did He know
Fortune's power would dwindle so?
Did He know that I should find
Such a curious change of mind,
And should some day come to see
Just how trivial pomp can be?

Little girl, just half-past three,
Lost are dreams that used to be.
Now the things I thought worth while
Could not buy your lovely smile,
And I would not give you up
For the golden plate and cup
And the crown a king may boast.
In my life you're uppermost.

Little girl, just half-past three,
This is what you mean to me,
More than all that money buys,
More than any selfish prize,
More than fortune, more than fame,
And I learned this when you came.
Other fathers know it, too.
Nothing matters more than you.

AN INTIMATE TALE

This is an intimate tale, a story of feminine wrath,
And a habit I've strangely acquired at the club when I've finished my bath.
You must know how the folly began, for the custom is woman's, not man's,
But the golf club provides for our use a sweet-scented powder in cans.
And I fancied the stuff must be cheap, for it's always supplied to us free,
So I stand when I come from my shower, shaking violet talcum on me.

I flourish the can high and low, not a little I use, but a lot.
I have said there's no charge for the stuff, so I fling it around, and why not?
And some of it falls on the floor, but why should I worry or care?
The stuff must be cheap, as I've said, or the club wouldn't put it out there.
So I talcum myself front and back, and be wastefulness truly a sin,
Then I err at no cost to myself, and the stuff feels so nice on the skin.

Now this habit so cheaply acquired has brought me to grief and despair.
Last night as I came from my bath, the wife's box of powder stood there,
And I just took it up and I shook, and shook as I would at the club,
And some of it fell upon me, and some on the floor and the tub.
But a few minutes later when she came into our room, with a shriek
She told me what's what in a tongue which only a woman can speak.

"Say, you!" she exclaimed in a voice denoting displeasure and fire,
"I'd a box full of powder to-day. Where is it? I want to inquire."
"I've just used a little," I said, and a blush of shame came to my cheek.
"A little!" she cried. "You have spilled far more than I'd use in a week!
That stuff you have wasted on you, on your trousers, your shoes and your socks,
Is the finest of powders from France, and it cost me four dollars a box."

KIDNAPED BY A DREAM

My mind has run away with me,
A kidnaped child am I;
A captive by a stretch of sea
Beneath a sunny sky.
Here at my desk, a thought or two
Snatched me from all I ought to do.

And those who come in search of me
Shall find me not to-day,
Unless they follow to the sea
In much the self-same way;
My mind has rushed me out of town
Where ships are sailing up and down.

Oh, I was free an hour ago!
But now with cords I'm tied
And none who pass me seem to know
How oft for help I've cried;
My mind, against my will, I say
Has made me prisoner for the day.

To-night they'll find my task undone,
  Upon the page no word,
Perhaps there'll be a search begun
  To learn what has occurred,
But here will be no trace of me
Since I'm a captive, far at sea.

I thought myself secure, but no,
  This thing men call the mind
Caught hold of me and bade me go
  And leave all care behind.
Now when I tell this tale, I know
They'll smile and say it isn't so.

AT PINEHURST

Oh, to be at Pinehurst
When spring is in the air!
And all the mutts and all the nuts
Of golf are gathered there.
'Tis good to go to Boston,
'Tis sweet to stop at Rye,
But I would go to Pinehurst
Where all the golf balls fly.

The governors and statesmen
Stand waiting on the tee,
The early ball has prior call
Though kings behind may be.
And yonder in the bunker
With curses in his throat
Is presidential timber
And a diplomat of note.

The air is sweet at Pinehurst,
The sky's a lovely blue,
But where you walk, the people talk
Of swing and follow through.
The preacher is a golfer,
God's blessing he invokes,
But the richest men at Pinehurst
Are beggars wanting strokes.

And here I am at Pinehurst,
For spring is in the air,
As Shakespeare said, the addled head
Is little noticed there.
For though my game be faulty
And erring is my pitch,
I'm giving strokes to beggars
And succoring the rich.

A QUESTION OF SIGHT

Two travelers along a road,
Each weighted with the self-same load
Of happiness and care,
Were chatting as they trudged ahead,
When suddenly one stopped and said:
"I see a farmhouse there!"

The other who was near-of-sight
Looked to the left and to the right,
And said: "It cannot be.
There is no farmhouse where you say,
No roof or chimney down the way,
No smoke that I can see."

"Look in the distance," cried his friend,
"There, where the road begins to bend,
You'll catch a flash of light!"
"There is no farmhouse there," said he,
"At least, not one that I can see,
Although you may be right."

"Well, never mind," his friend replied.
"Some day we'll reach it side by side,
And you shall see it then."
"Perhaps," said he, "but as for me,
Nothing exists I cannot see."
Thus quarreled two good men.

So with the great eternal life
Beyond this vale of mortal strife.
Some glimpse a vision fair,
And some, not quite so keen of sight,
Peer vainly for the distant light
And say it isn't there.

UNCHANGED

The "sweet sixteen" of old has disappeared;
A wiser lovlier creature now we see.
To-day no man of thirty wears a beard,
And grandma tries a youthful dame to be.
All ages play a swifter, faster game;
Thank heavens, childhood still remains the same!

Mothers no longer rock their babes to sleep;
The flapper calls her father "dear, old bean!"
Age has no secrets now that it can keep;
There's little left unmentioned or unseen.
The world has changed since Eve and Adam came;
Thank heavens, childhood still remains the same!

Women no longer boast their wealth of hair;
The barber shops are double-sexed to-day.
Old men are dancing with a giddy air;
The glories of the past have blown away.
What once was sport is now considered tame;
Thank heavens, childhood still remains the same!

Let fad and fashion sweep the wide world o'er;
They cannot change the charm in little eyes.
The children still will romp about the floor
And out of mud make chocolate cakes and pies.
Whatever else may come to praise or blame,
Thank heavens, childhood still remains the same!

THE COMMON DOG

One time there was a common dog who envied
nobler breeds,
He noticed that their coats were smooth and free from burrs and seeds;
He saw them held in ladies' laps and following rich men's heels,
And learned they had good beds at night and most delicious meals.
And so he vowed unto himself that constantly he'd strive
To make himself as smooth and sleek as any dog alive.

And outwardly he turned the trick; he found a rich man's door
Who took him in and let him sleep upon his velvet
floor.
He fed him well and brushed his coat; his tail to wag would start
To hear his master speak of him as a noble dog and smart;
But having come to luxury and fought that battle through
He thought he then could do the things that common canines do.

And so he ran away at night and roamed the alleys, where
The dirty homeless dogs are found, and soiled his glossy hair.
And torn and tattered he'd return to everyone's disgust,
Until the rich man's wife declared; "Get rid of him you must!
This dog is just a common cur, as everyone must know,
He wasn't bred for luxury." And so they let him go.

Well, men at times work tricks like that, as everywhere appears;
To get to walk with millionaires they'll work and slave for years,
And when at last their fortune comes, they fling the barriers down
And chase the pleasures which belong to the commonest folks in town.
Then men and women everywhere disgusted turn and say:
"He wasn't bred for luxury or he wouldn't act that way."

NIGHT

When night comes down
To the busy town
  And the toilers stir no more,
Then who knows which
Is the poor or rich
  Of the day which went before?

When dreams sweep in
Through the traffic's din
  For the weary minds of men,
Though we all can say
Who is rich by day,
  Who can name us the rich man then?

It is only awake
The proud may take
  Much joy from the stuff they own,
For the night may keep
Her gifts of sleep
  For the humblest mortal known.

By day held fast
To creed and caste
  Men are sinner and saint and clown,
But who can tell
Where the glad hearts dwell
  When the dreams come drifting down?

LIFE ON THE EARTH

When they shall ask me over there
What did you see, what did you do,
In what great splendors did you share?
Tell us about the folks you knew,
I'll bet they'll smile to hear me say:
"I saw the tulips bloom in May."

Spring after spring I loved the breeze
Which clover blossomed to perfume;
I watched the birds build nests in trees
And saw the roses come to bloom.
For trout I used to wade the streams,
And had an endless stock of dreams.

The heart of me was often gay,
Despite the cares I had to bear;
There never came a dreary day
But what some loveliness was there;
And rich or poor or great or low,
The friends I made were good to know.

I had a little garlen there,
A home where it was good to stay;
I'd food for all, and some to spare,
And there were games I loved to play;
And though I sighed for pleasures lost,
Life on the earth was worth its cost.

TIME

Man impatient to possess
All he wants of happiness
  Works with feverish hands,
Striving for his whim to-day;
But Old Father Time says: "Nay!
  Toil and till your lands.
O'er that wall will ivy climb
Not to-morrow, but in time."

Man would have a maple tree
At a certain spot where he Wishes birds to nest.
"Now I'd have it!" is his cry;
"It may be that I shall die
  Ere it's at its best."
Father Time says: "Trees are slow,
Some take twenty years to grow."

Father Time is never swift
In the making of a gift;
  Slowly on he goes.
Man who wants life's beauty soon
Has to wait till middle-June
  For the budding rose.
Unto all who would be great
Father Time says: "Work and wait."

Oh be patient, eager man,
Life is purposed to a plan,
  Wisdom comes with years.
Time will teach you, as you grow,
Everything you want to know
  When the need appears.
Even mysteries sublime
You will understand in time.

THEN AND NOW

Oh, to be a boy again!
To live the old-time joy again,
To run with laughter everywhere
And seldom wince at pain;
To eat whatever food's in sight
With a perpetual appetite;
To grin at summer's burning sun
And laugh at autumn's rain.

Yet often though I wish again
To run and swim and fish again,
As did the care-free little boy
Who once I used to be,
I wouldn't backwards turn the page
And barter all the joys of age
To let some fairy steal my years
And make a boy of me.

Though much of joy was mine to know,
This older life is fine to know;
I walk with laughter still today
Despite my freight of care.
I'm sure I would not now enjoy
All things I cherished as a boy,
Nor wish to give my pleasures up
In boyhood's fun to share.

To life this is my attitude:
I have a sense of gratitude
For every joy which I have known;
A happy boy was I.
But it is fun a man to be,
And it is good to live and see
The richer beauty of the world
As time goes swinging by.

TWILIGHT

There come to me a few glad moments, when
The busy day is ended, and I stray
Into the garden, shut away from men
And all their tasks and all the sports they play.

The birds are homing for the coming night,
The air is still and peaceful and serene,
But there's a beauty in the fading light
Which at the noon of day is seldom seen.

Pansies and poppies, peonies and phlox,
All with a long day's toil complete to view!
Trees which have stood perennial storms and shocks,
Old as the world, yet always young and new.

I walk among them where the shadows fall,
And seem to feel in touch with things divine;
Who knows, but I am brother to them all,
Brother to bluebell, rose and columbine?

THEORY AND PRACTICE

Twixt theory and practice lies
A chasm wide and deep.
With theory the brilliant wise
A bivouac nightly keep,
While heavy hearts and weary eyes
Turn from their toil to sleep.

Life is not what it ought to be,
The theorists declare;
But this the eyes of all can see
For wrong is everywhere:
Rain falls the very day that we
Have prayed for weather fair.

And there are hurts which seem unjust
And dreams which go astray;
In spite of all our care we must Face many a bitter day:
Sometimes the one we've grown to trust
Flings all our faith away.

But he is happiest here who moves
Serenely towards his goal,
Who does not set his life in grooves
But sees it as a whole,
And meeting joy or sorrow, proves
The valor of his soul.

TO THE JUNE BRIDE

The groom is at the altar, and the organ's playing low,
Young and old, your friends are waiting, they are sitting row by row.
Now your girlhood's all behind you, in a few brief minutes more
You'll be wife to him who's waiting, through the years that lie before.

Oh, I say it not to daunt you, but to strengthen you for fate,
In the distance for your coming many heavy trials wait.
Whoso enters into marriage takes a very solemn vow
To be faithful to the other when the days are not as now.

Arm in arm you'll walk together through the lane of many years,
Side by side you'll reap life's pleasures, side by side you'll shed your tears;

'Tis a long road you'll be faring, for I've journeyed half the way,
But if love and faith sustain you you will triumph,
come what may.

There's the happy time of marriage, but to every man and wife
Also come the hurts and sorrows and the bitterness of life;
For by these your faith is tested, 'tis by these your love shall grow,
And my prayer is love shall guide you wheresoever
you shall go.

THE HOME

Write it down that here I labored,
Here I sang and laughed and neighbored;
Here's the sum of all my story,
Here's my fortune and my glory;
These four walls and friendly door
Mark the goal I struggled for.
Never mind its present worth,
Here's one hundred feet of earth
Where the passer-by can see
Every dream which came to me.

Write it down: my life uncloses
Here among these budding roses;
In this patch of lawn I've tended,
Here is all I've counted splendid;
Here's the goal that's held me true
To the tasks I've had to do.
Here for all the world to scan
Is my secret thought and plan;
Through the long years gone before,
This is what I struggled for.

Write it down, when I have perished:
Here is everything I've cherished;
That these walls should glow with beauty
Spurred my lagging soul to duty;
That there should be gladness here

Kept me toiling, year by year.
Here in phlox and marigold
Is my every purpose told;
Every thought and every act
Were to keep this home intact.

THE WILD FLOWERS

Men cover the earth with brick and stone
But the violets steal away
To the shady places but little known
To be found by some one who walks alone
In the calm of a summer day.

And the ferns move out to some distant spot
Where the earth is cool and sweet;
With trees and song birds they cast their lot,
Let men build cities, they like them not,
Nor the ceaseless tramp of feet.

The wild flowers sneer at man's buildings great
And flee from the city's hum;
Away from turmoil and pride and hate
They live and bud and blossom, and wait
For the few friends who may come.

AT THE JOURNEY'S END

Come, death, be merciful and end his pain!
Life has deserted him and hope is vain.
You were his foe, but at the journey's end
Now he would welcome you and call you friend.

The life he loved is over. All is done!
He is too tired to greet the morning sun,
He is too tired for laughter or for care,
Strike the last blow and let him slumber there.

No bright to-morrow here for him can dawn,
The last sweet joys of earth for him are gone,
Anguish and pain are all life has to give,
He longs for sleep, but sleep life cannot give.

Come, death, be friendly—end his bitter pain,
Seal those brave lips which shall not smile again.
We who must stay shall weep that he must go;
Peace comes with death—and it were better so.

MEMORIAL DAY

Now the living come to spread
Flowers above their hero dead;
Now above each silent grave
Flies the flag they died to save.

Drums are tapped and bugles blown,
Voices in a muffled tone
Speak of them, as proof that we Hold them all in memory.

But I wonder, do they hear?
Are their spirits hovering near?
Can they with a clearer sight
See and read our hearts aright?

These, our little gifts of flowers,
Wither in a few brief hours:
With the midnight shall we say
Done is our Memorial day?

Can we truly tell that we Hold them long in memory,
Save the faith in us survives
Which to keep they gave their lives?

God, this tribute let us give,
Bravely for their cause we live;
All the dreams for which they died
Still within our breasts abide.

I MAKE AN EXPERIMENT

The boy that hangs about my frame
Has left the old man stiff and lame;
The youngster that delights to stay
Within this aging house of clay
As lively as he used to be
Has made a sorry wreck of me.

I wince with every muscle twinge,
I creak at every ancient hinge;
The sprightly step I had is gone,
Today I merely totter on
And all because that youthful soul
Insisted that I still could bowl.

'Tis more than twenty years ago
Since last I stooped a ball to throw,
But still I'd not forgotten how,
And though there's silver at my brow
That boy, who mocks at fading hair,
Just itched once more to strike and spare.

And so, despite my aging frame,
I tried once more that famous game;
That ball which once with ease I threw
Now seemed to weigh a ton or two,
And strangely, too, I ought to say,
Those ten pins seemed a mile away.

This morning, tired and muscle sore,
A sad old man I walk the floor;
And though my spirit still is fresh
I am a lump of worn out flesh.
Hearts may stay young, as we are told,
But this I know—man's joints grow old.

A MODERN CLOTHESLINE

Time was that on Mondays the washing was done
And the clothes hung to dry in the warmth of the sun,
And they flapped in the breeze for the whole world to see,
But the sight was as drab and as plain as could be;
For the garments of old were of white or of gray
And they looked all alike in that old-fashioned day.

On Mondays the family washing's still done
And hung out to dry in the warmth of the sun,
And it flaps in the breezes, but strange to behold!
There's a blend now of orchid and scarlet and gold;
The drabness has vanished. The passer-by views
A radiant clothesline of marvelous hues.

I passed by a clothesline and chuckled in mirth,
It seemed that a rainbow had fallen to earth,
With its lavender tints blended there with the pink
And the fluffies of yellow, called step-ins, I think;
And I said as I looked at those purples and tans,
"The only plain things on that line are a man's!"

SUCCESS

Success is doing something well,
  It's winning faith and trust,
Despite what theorists may tell
  It's doing what you must;
It's giving all the best of you
To every task you have to do.

Success is not the gift of luck
  When rightly understood,
It's keeping on with grit and pluck
  To make your service good;
It's keeping honest, when you meet
An easy chance to play the cheat.

Success is in the will to be
  On friendly terms with men,
It's in little things they'll see
  When next you meet again;
For nothing ever lives so long
Or works such havoc as a wrong.

Who gives his best to every task,
  Who keeps the faith with all,
For friends will never have to ask
  Or for assistance call:
But who with any trust does less
Will never be a real success.

THE CITY HOME

Although the motors rush along
And wild flowers grow no more,
And fled are all the birds of song
To nest beyond the roar,
Although the trees are coming down
To make more room for men,
'Tis home within the busy town
To which I turn again.

'Tis not a winding lane I fare
But one that's straight and wide,
The pavements now are cold and bare,
Long since the flowers have died:
But still I keep a patch of grass,
And save a rose or two
For all the busy men who pass
In summertime to view.

The city home is on a street
Where once the wild flowers grew,
And once the song birds used to meet
On meadows wet with dew:
Now wall by wall the houses stand,
And all the trees have gone,
And concrete covers far the land
The cattle grazed upon.

For commerce drives the birds away
With all its noisy roar,
And speeds its motors day by day
Where wild flowers grew before;
And progress builds the busy town
By piling bricks in air,
But still it's home when night comes down,
And all life's joys are there.

A BOMBING SQUAD FLIES OVER

Overhead the airplanes fly,
Fifteen birds in echelon,
Fifteen monarchs of the sky
And a boy in every one.

Overhead the motors roar,
From their nooks the pigeons fly,
Refugees that race before
These invaders of the sky.

Startled pigeons, well I know
Why you wildly dart and wheel;
Here's a strange and ugly foe
Come your lovely sky to steal.

Now they're swooping down again,
Fifteen boys in perfect line;
Watching through my window pane,
Terror, such as yours, is mine.

I am fearful of this thing
Rushing, roaring through the sky,
Fifteen young hearts, wing to wing!
Of an older age am I.

Youth may laugh and mock at me,
But my old heart beats with fear;
This is danger that I see,
Danger very real and near.

THE WORST OF PESTS

I do not mind the driver who would faster go than I;
I will quickly, when he signals, turn aside to let him by:
For the driver of the taxi I am glad to turn aside,
He is busy earning money, not just out to take a ride:
But the driver I can't stand for, be his car of steel or tin,
Is that chap who blocks the traffic by his selfish edging in.

There's the boy who races signals—let him rush along his way—
For the officer will get him in the end and he will pay;
I can chuckle at the driver, though he rouses others'
scorn,
Who displays his restless spirit by the honking of the horn:
But the one who most disturbs me, in the city's rush
and din,
Is the chap who crowds his fellows and insists on edging in.

The stop sign never stops him—he keeps crawling on his way,
And he shows no thought for others or the law he should obey:
Though a dozen cars are coming, he won't leave their pathway clear,
They must stop to let him over or profanity they'll hear:
And I always get a chuckle and I always get a grin
When somebody strips a fender from the chap who edges in.

THE CHILDREN KNOW

Old folks see the tulips red
Growing in my garden bed;
Childhood with a clearer sight
Peeps into the blossoms bright,
And upon a silver chair
Sees a fairy sitting there.

Old folks walk my garden round
With an air that's most profound,
Seeing here and there a weed,
Noting blossoms gone to seed;
Little Janet, though, can tell
Visitors where goblins dwell.

Age which knows so much can see
All the dead limbs on the tree,
Every blemish round the place;
Janet, with a happier face,
Has a thousand charms to show,
Charms which only children know.

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

Page

A friend is one who stands to share....134
All-day suckers and lollypops....107
Although the motors rush along....181
And now she dwells where neither doubt nor fear....145
An oak tree died the other day....32
A public speaker's lot is not an easy one to bear....113
A thousand men filed in by day....77
Aunt Jane was one of the worrying kind....92

Bees are in the blossoms....126
Beneath the stars at night when all was clear....112

Come, death, be merciful and end his pain!....175

Dead they left Him in the tomb....71
Dear Lord, for food and drink and peace....96
Dear Lord, our little baby bless....140
Death, the collector, came to him and said....125
Dreams are for a summer's day!....58

Ed and John were little boys in the long ago....43

Figure it out for yourself, my lad....91
For fish and birds I make this plea....74
From birth to death the pathway leads....26

Give us more lovers of beauty....121
God builds no churches!....82
God grant me this: the right to come at night....53
Gold is found in the hills....44
Grant me, O Lord, this day to see....31

His life was gentle, and his mind....93
How many babies have you?....141
How strange is age, that season of decay....22

Page

I can be happy in a boat 86
I do not mind the driver who would faster go than I 183
If I knew a better land on this glorious world of ours 33
If I were asked one thing to name 47
If to be clever means that I must sneer 95
If wealth were all a man required 54
If youth had been willing to listen 106
If you walk as a friend you will find a friend 27
I had a full day in my purse 79
I had an old, tired car 64
I have a life I can't escape 75
I like to see a lovely lawn 69
"I'm a golfer, St. Peter!" 65
I'm just an old fool 25
"I'm not a philosopher, bearded and gray" 63
I'm the sensitive soul that is known as the dub! 116
I'm the sort of a fool that will pull up a chair 131
In all this world of loveliness there lies 127
I never see a gallant ship go steaming out to sea 103
Into my room a stranger came 87
"I played so badly," said the organist 124
I sometimes get weary of people 18
I stand and look about to-day 150
It doesn't matter much be its buildings great or small 111
It's all very well to have courage and skill 105
It's good to do the hard job 101
I've never worn a high silk hat 118
I've sat upon his left, and I 128

Life is queer and people move 70
Little girl, just half-past three 151
Looking back, it seems to me 50

Man impatient to possess 165
Men cover the earth with brick and stone 174

Page

Money and fame and health alone 21
Much I've done and much I've seen 15
My grandpa once was very sick 17
My mind has run away with me 155
My son, when plans have gone astray 115

Now the living come to spread 176

Oh, bride and groom, the day is fair 85
"Oh, if only I had known!" 23
Oh, I have fared through laughter 147
Oh, let me have my work to do 102
Oh, once I sent a ship to sea 109
Oh, singing bird! I wonder now and then 132
Oh, the days I've wasted 78
Oh, to be a boy again! 167
Oh, to be at Pinehurst 157
Oh, whether it's business or whether it's sport 108
Old folks see the tulips red 185
Once there was a little girl who wouldn't go to bed 59
One broken dream is not the end of dreaming 97
One time I told a giant tale before she went to bed 99
One time there was a common dog 161
Overhead the airplanes fly 182

Shame seldom gets the man who sees 119
Some look at care as if it should not be 123
Some say that chance or guess or hazard makes 117
Sometimes I get to thinkin' o' the days o' youth 19
Success is doing something well 180

The boy that hangs about my frame 177
The dentist tinkered day by day 83
The groom is at the altar 171
The human family is queer 133
The joy of getting home again 57
The keys to the car! 39

Page

The mind is that mysterious thing 67
The old-time barber used to be a genial sort of cuss 41
There are two worlds wherein to dwell 81
There come to me a few glad moments 169
There is many a battle that's yet to be won 51
There was action in the old days 90
There was a man I once knew well 73
The salesman saw his shabby clothes 36
The "sweet sixteen" of old has disappeared 160
The weakest excuses of all the lot 98
The woods and fields and trees are ours 122
They said he was a doctor 135
They say life's simple—but I don't know 55
This is an intimate tale 153
This is what a man likes 35
This younger generation seems 139
Time was that on Mondays the washing was done 179
'Tis well enough to brag and boast 143
To-day as I was starting out 49
Twixt theory and practice lies 170
Two travelers along a road 158

Up and down the lanes of love 45

Well, you see, I met your mother at a wedding 29
What a wonder world it is 149
"What this house is going to be" 61
When first I met your father 27
When night comes down 163
When sages old on life reflect 104
When the bees are in the clover 89
When they shall ask me over there 164
While ordinary mortals play 144
Who builds a house or plants a rose or two 148
Who teaches little Janet slang 129
"Why do we have a flag?" asked she 137
Write it down that here I labored 173